The Southwest Regional Moot Court Competition was held on November 17 and 18, 1950, under the auspices of the Southwestern Legal Foundation at the Southwestern Legal Center on the Southern Methodist University Campus. Four teams competed, representing the law schools of the University of Oklahoma, Southern Methodist University, the University of Texas, and Tulane University. The University of Oklahoma team was declared the winner of the regional competition and advanced to the final competition for national honors in New York City. National honors and the Samuel Seabury Prize were eventually won by the Georgetown University Law School team.

Representing the Southern Methodist University School of Law was the team of Richard E. Batson, Jr., Rufus S. Garrett, Jr., and Robert L. Wright.
