Appendix A—Class of 1967, honors and awards, student activities and organizations for the year 1966-1967

Appendix B—Faculty bibliography and activities, 1966-1967

Appendix C—Law School Committee of the Board of Trustees; Board of Visitors; Law Alumni Association; and Named Scholarships

Appendix D—Statement of Dean delivered at the Law School Convocation on Friday, September 8, 1967

I. General Statement

In May 1967, the School of Law completed its forty-second academic year. Degrees were awarded in May to those who completed the requirements for the degree in August 1966, January 1967, and May 1967. The following tabular analysis reflects comparative data with respect to degrees conferred or certificates granted during the period 1964-1967:

	1964	1965	1966	1967
Bachelor of Laws	113	107	128	125
Master of Comparative Law	15	12	19	23
Master of Laws	1	4	4	7
Certificate in Comparative Law	4	1		4
Totals	133	124	151	159

Appendix A contains detailed information regarding the 1967 degree candidates, honors and awards, and student activities and organizations for the year 1966-1967.

Last year in my report I commented in extenso on the increasing complexity of the law and the consequent increasing complexity of legal education. I commented also on the increasing number of claims and demands on law faculty members to participate in projects, symposia, conferences, and the like.

This complexity of legal institutions and legal education has resulted in a substantial increase in the costs of operating a private law school of quality—or, indeed, any private educational facility of quality. There has been a spate of articles in the popular press about this problem, as representatives of many of the older private institutions are voicing serious concern about the future of private education in this country. If costs are becoming a serious problem to the well endowed, generously supported, older private institutions, how much more are they a problem in the case of an institution less than fifty years old.

Traditionally and historically the American people have regarded the private school as the institution of academic excellence, one where the frontiers of knowledge were being explored and pushed back. In times past young men and women and their parents regarded private school education as something special and unique. When one considered quality education, whether in the law or in other disciplines, one's mind turned to names like Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Columbia, Cornell, Chicago, Northwestern, Duke, Vanderbilt, and Stanford. Now, however, a new dimension has been added in education, which presents a wholly new phenomenon in American experience. For some years the people of the various states through their state legislatures have insisted on better standards in public education. This began somewhat unevenly at first, so that here and there state institutions were invested with increasingly greater resources to fund programs of excellence. More recently, however, these efforts have expanded so considerably that substantial resources are now poured into almost all of the state systems to provide facilities and to achieve and maintain overall programs of impressive stature.

There was a time when a scholar was willing to teach in a private school and take some of his compensation in psychic income—prestige of association, independence from state or political interference, smaller classes, etc. Presently, however, the state colleges and universities are able to offer an environment of the most attractive character: small classes, time for research, administrative support in secretarial and staff services, and little or no public or political interference. State institutions now bid in the market for excellent scholar-teachers and students and are getting them. Moreover, there are so many opportunities for prestigious activities in government, the Peace Corps, private foundations, state and federal welfare agencies, that one can find many avenues for satisfying his aspirations for dedicated public service.

All of these factors have required private institutions to compete more rigorously for personnel—both teachers and students. The result has been annual percentage increases in the costs of operating a private school that in recent years far outrun the percentage increases in costs generally. Select any parameter of costs—cost of living, wholesale price index, the price of steel, department store indices of consumer buying, wages in basic industries, or whatever—and the graph of such factors plotted against a function of time will reflect nothing like the increase in costs over the same period in the running of any major law school.

Unless there is a substantial investment of funds in private, professional graduate education, the outlook is for less dependence on voluntary giving and tuition and greater reliance on some kind of new accommodation or arrangement involving massive Federal and state support.

The School of Law of Southern Methodist University is no exception to these developing trends in private education. To maintain the School's reputation and quality education serving the Southwestern region, the School must be adequately funded as was contemplated in the Master Plan adopted by the Board of Trustees in 1963. Without the $15 million of endowment contemplated in such Master Plan funding, there must inevitably be that compromising with the dimensions of excellence so necessary to the continuation of the School's preeminence as a first-rate law school.

II. Faculty

Appendix B sets out in detail Faculty bibliographies and activities for the year 1966-1967.

Changes of assignments, new appointments, leaves, part-time faculty during the summer session 1966 and during the regular session 1966-1967 were as follows:

Professor Roy Robert Ray retired on June 30, 1967, after 37 years of loyal and devoted service to the School of Law, and was designated Professor Emeritus. He will continue to teach in the fields of torts and evidence and will work on the Law School Fund.

Professor Moss Wimbish retired in September 1966 after completing 20 years of loyal and devoted service to the School of Law. He was designated Professor Emeritus.

Assistant Professor Robert A. Bernstein joined the faculty on September 1, 1966, from the Tax Division of the Department of Justice. He holds the Bachelor of Science and Master of Arts degrees from Stanford University and the Bachelor of Laws degree from American University, where he was Editor-in-Chief of the American University Law Review. During the academic year 1966-1967, he taught Taxation, Estate Planning and Practice, and Problems of Doing Business Abroad.

Professor Alan R. Bromberg was granted a sabbatical leave and was a scholar in residence at Yale University Law School, where he completed the manuscript on his book entitled: "Securities Law-Fraud-SEC Rule 10b-5."

Visiting Professor Richard Cosway was in residence during the year from the University of Washington. He holds the Bachelor of Arts degree from Denison University and the Bachelor of Laws degree from the University of Cincinnati. During the academic year 1966-1967 he taught Commercial Transactions, Creditors Rights, and Property Security.

Assistant Professor and Assistant Dean James R. Craig was in residence as a graduate student at Yale University Law School where he received the Master of Laws degree and completed his residence as a candidate for the degree of Doctor of the Science of Law.

Visiting Professor Carlos A. Garber of Buenos Aires, Argentina, was in residence during the spring semester. He holds the law degree (abogado) from the University of Buenos Aires and the Master of Comparative Law degree from Southern Methodist University. During the spring semester 1967 he taught Civil Law II, Commercial Law II (Civil), and Latin American Constitutions.

Assistant Professor Paul B. Larsen joined the faculty on September 1, 1966. He holds the Bachelor of Arts degree from Wilmington College, the Bachelor of Laws degree from the University of Cincinnati, and studied at the University of Copenhagen. He holds the Master of Laws degree from New York University, a Master of Laws in Air and Space Law from McGill University, and is a candidate for the degree of Doctor of the Science of Law from Yale University. During the academic year 1966-1967 he taught Property, Air Law, and Conflict of Laws.

Visiting Professor Hector A. Mairal of Buenos Aires, Argentina, was in residence during the fall semester. He holds the law degree (abogado) from the University of Buenos Aires, and the Master of Comparative Law degree from Southern Methodist University. During the fall semester 1966 he taught Civil Law I, Commercial Law I (Civil), and Administrative Law (Civil).

Professor Joseph W. McKnight was granted a sabbatical leave for the spring semester and summer of 1967. Professor McKnight was a Visiting Member of the Law Department at The London School of Economics and Political Science (University of London) where he gave lectures and was engaged in research. He also lectured at several other colleges in Great Britain. During the second spring term, Professor McKnight was in residence as a Visiting Professor of Law at the University of Edinburgh where he lectured and was also lecturer at other universities in Scotland.

Visiting Professor Charles J. Morris joined the faculty on September 1, 1966. He holds the Bachelor of Arts degree from Temple University and the Bachelor of Laws degree from Columbia University. He practiced in the field of labor law in Dallas before joining the faculty. During the academic year 1966-1967, he taught Labor Law, Evidence, Procedure, and the Labor Problems Seminar.

Assistant Professor George Pelletier joined the faculty on September 1, 1966. He holds the Bachelor of Business Administration and the Bachelor of Laws degrees from Notre Dame University, where he served on the Board of Editors of the Notre Dame Lawyer. He holds the Master of Laws degree from Harvard University and attended the Hague Academy of International Law in 1964. He is a candidate for the degree of Doctor of the Science of Law from the University of Virginia. Mr. Pelletier taught in the United States Army Judge Advocate General's School at Charlottesville, Virginia. During the academic year 1966-1967, he taught Business Associations, Taxation, Corporate Reorganizations, and Problems of Doing Business Abroad.

Assistant Professor Reba G. Rasor joined the faculty on September 1, 1966. Mrs. Rasor holds the Bachelor of Journalism degree from the University of Texas, and the Bachelor of Laws degree from Southern Methodist University, where she served as Associate Editor of the Southwestern Law Journal. During the academic year 1966-1967, she taught Legal Writing and assisted Professor Charmatz in the Southwestern Law Journal seminar.

Assistant Professor and Assistant Dean Charles A. Thompson joined the faculty on September 1, 1966. Mr. Thompson holds the Associate in Science from the University of Texas at Arlington, the degree of Bachelor of Arts in Journalism from the University of Montana, and the Bachelor of Laws degree from Southern Methodist University, where he was Editor-in-Chief of the Journal of Air Law and Commerce. During the academic year 1966-1967, he taught Legal Writing.

Assistant Professor Joseph B. Wolens acted as assistant dean during the year 1965-1966. He was also in residence that year as a candidate for the degree of Master of Laws. Effective September 1, 1966, Mr. Wolens held the rank of Assistant Professor. He holds the Bachelor of Arts degree from Rice University, where he did an additional year of graduate study. He holds the Bachelor of Laws degree from Southern Methodist University. Prior to his association with the Law School he had been in the general practice of law in Wichita Falls, Texas. During the academic year 1966-1967, he taught Business Associations and Corporate Planning.

The following part-time lecturers taught seminars or courses in the School during this period:

Adjunct Professor Henry D. Akin, course in Workmen's Compensation; Larry L. Bean, Esq., course in Federal Oil and Gas Taxation; Edward A. Copley, Jr., Esq., together with Herbert S. Kendrick, Esq., course in Tax Procedure and Litigation; Marshall J. Doke, Jr., Esq., course in Government Contracts; Jack W. Hawkins, Esq., course in Legal Accounting; Richard D. Haynes, Esq., course in Securities Regulation; Paul McCarroll, Esq., course in Abstracts; Donald J. Malouf, Esq., course in Taxation of Business Entities; Professor Burton H. Patterson of the School of Business Administration of Texas Christian University, course in Texas Matrimonial Property; Professor Roland W. Porth of the SMU School of Business Administration, course in Legal Accounting; D. Carl Richards, Esq., course in Patent Law; Walter W. Steele, Jr., Esq., course in Crimes; Adjunct Professor Ozro T. Woods, seminar in Medico-Legal Problems.

III. Degree Programs

The School of Law operated the following major programs during the year 1966-1967:

(A) The three-year Bachelor of Laws program in the undergraduate Day Division.

(B) The second, third, and fourth year curricula of the four-year Bachelor of Laws program in the undergraduate Evening Division.

(C) The general graduate program for both part-time and full-time students leading to the degree of Master of Laws.

(D) The graduate program in international and comparative law leading to the degree of Master of Comparative Law.

(E) The graduate program in research and writing leading to the degree of Doctor of the Science of Law.

IV. Curriculum

The curriculum in effect from September 1, 1966, for the Bachelor of Laws program consisted of 90 hours of required work. During the summer session 1966, 13 sections of courses and seminars were offered, and during the regular session 1966-1967, 149 sections of courses and seminars were offered. Under the course program in effect during the year, the student was required to take a basic curriculum of 36 hours with 54 hours of electives. In selecting elective courses, the student was required to meet certain minimum hour requirements in each of five groups: Business, Property, Litigation, Public Law, and International and Comparative Law and Jurisprudence. The student also was required to complete three units in research and writing, either as part of formal course work or as part of independent directed research.

During the year the Committee on Law School Curriculum under the chairmanship of Professor Flittie engaged in a serious review of all aspects of curriculum and made recommendations which were the subject of extended debate by the faculty in regular meetings. The effect of the action of the Faculty of the School of Law in respect to these recommendations was to increase the required courses to 49 hours, with 41 hours of electives, eliminate the group requirements described above, require at least one planning course, require at least one seminar in which a substantial paper is required, and require at least one course in the fields of international law, comparative law, or jurisprudence.

Criticism is often directed at law school curricula that too much time is given to courses which deal with property, taxation, corporations, and generally with the acquisition and conservation of wealth, and too little time to those which deal with the relevance of the law to the human problems of modern society. We have sought to correct this imbalance in our own curriculum by the introduction in the past of courses and seminars in professional responsibility, law and psychiatry, law and ethics, employee relations, arbitration, and so on. During the year under review new offerings included a seminar in Criminal Trial Advocacy and Practice, offered by Professor Bolton in the summer of 1966, a seminar in the Legal Problems of the Urban Society offered by Professor Baernstein, and a seminar in Labor Problems offered by Professor Morris in the spring of 1967. Furthermore, during the year a greater number of students participated in legal aid work. In order to intensify the efforts at precision in writing on the Southwestern Law Journal, a seminar was offered by Professor Charmatz for the entire year for law journal editors and staff in which case notes and comments were thoroughly reviewed and criticized before publication.

V. Law Library and Classroom Expansion

During the year $127,362.50 was expended on the library operation. About 7,439 volumes were added, making a total of 141,496 volumes.

I reported last year the favorable action taken on our application for funds under Titles II and III of the Higher Educational Facilities Act of 1963 for construction of a new library and for remodeling Florence Hall (the classroom building).

Plans and specifications for the remodeling of Florence Hall were completed and submitted for bids, and work was begun in the latter part of May 1967, with scheduled completion in January 1968.

Plans and specifications for the new library are to be completed by October 15, and construction should begin sometime in the Spring of 1968.

The matching funds necessary for these projects total $1,000,000, with an additional $1,500,000 required to repay Federal government loans which will be amortizable over thirty years. Thus, a minimum of $2,500,000 is required for this physical expansion and additional endowment is necessary to fund the increased annual maintenance costs of these facilities.

Funding efforts have proceeded slowly; however, we are hopeful that with an acceleration of effort in the coming year, we will achieve the necessary goal.

VI. Recruiting and Enrollment

The following comparative statistics for the School of Law show registrations in the fall semesters, 1962, 1963, 1964, 1965, and 1966:

Tuition costs were increased from $1,075 to $1,350 for the regular session.

Faculty and students visited the following schools during the year, interviewing prospective students:

Alabama: Auburn University, Auburn; Birmingham Southern College, Birmingham.

Arkansas: Hendrix College, Conway; Little Rock University, Little Rock.

Connecticut: Fairfield University, Fairfield; Wesleyan University, Middletown; Yale University, New Haven.

Georgia: Georgia Institute of Technology, Atlanta; Emory University, Atlanta; Morehouse College, Atlanta.

Illinois: Illinois Wesleyan University, Bloomington; Knox College, Galesburg; Millikin University, Decatur; Monmouth College, Monmouth.

Iowa: Cornell College, Mount Vernon; Drake University, Des Moines; Grinnell College, Grinnell; Iowa State University, Ames.

Massachusetts: Harvard University, Cambridge.

Minnesota: Augsburg College, Minneapolis; Gustavus Adolphus College, St. Peter; Macalester College, St. Paul; St. Olaf College, Northfield; St. Thomas College, St. Paul; University of Minnesota at Duluth, Duluth; University of Minnesota, Minneapolis.

Mississippi: Millsaps College, Jackson.

Nebraska: Municipal University of Omaha, Omaha.

New Jersey: Fairleigh Dickinson University, Teaneck.

New York: City College of City University of New York, New York City; Long Island University, Zeckendorf Campus, Brooklyn.

North Carolina: Catawba College, Salisbury; Davidson College, Davidson; Duke University, Durham; Furman University, Greenville; Guilford College, Greensboro; North Carolina College, Durham; North Carolina State University, Raleigh; University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill; Wake Forest College, Winston-Salem.

Ohio: Baldwin-Wallace College, Berea; Cleveland State University, Cleveland; College of Wooster, Wooster; John Carroll University, Cleveland; Kent State University, Kent; Ohio Wesleyan University, Delaware; University of Akron, Akron; Western Reserve University, Cleveland.

Pennsylvania: University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia.

Rhode Island: Brown University, Providence; Providence College, Providence.

South Carolina: Newberry College, Newberry; The Citadel, Charleston; University of South Carolina, Columbia.

Tennessee: Memphis State University, Memphis; Middle Tennessee State University, Murfreesboro; Southwestern at Memphis College, Memphis; University of the South, Sewanee; Vanderbilt University, Nashville.

Texas: Abilene Christian College, Abilene; University of Texas at Arlington, Arlington; Austin College, Sherman; Bishop College, Dallas; East Texas State University, Commerce; Hardin-Simmons University, Abilene; Lamar State College of Technology, Beaumont; Midwestern University, Wichita Falls; McMurry College, Abilene; North Texas State University, Denton; Rice University, Houston; Southern Methodist University, Dallas; Southwestern University, Georgetown; Texas A&M University, College Station; University of Texas at El Paso, El Paso.

On November 18-19, 1966, 31 pre-law advisors of 26 colleges and universities in the Southwestern region were the guests of the Law School. They were given a briefing on legal education generally and various facts about our Law School. This program was a most successful first experiment in bringing pre-law advisors to our premises for a first-hand observation of the School.

VII. Alumni Relations, Law School Fund, Student Aid

When I became Dean on November 1, 1963, I visited alumni in various cities in the state. During September and October, 1966, I repeated this circuit visiting at luncheons or dinners the alumni in Lubbock, Abilene, Midland, El Paso, Wichita Falls, Amarillo, Tyler, Corpus Christi, Houston, Sherman, Fort Worth, and Dallas. Mr. Donald J. Lucas, Vice President of the Law Alumni Association, accompanied me to Tyler for a dinner meeting; Professor Roy R. Ray attended both the Houston and Fort Worth dinner meetings with me; and Professor A. J. Thomas attended the Sherman dinner meeting.

On November 19, 1966, the officers and directors of the Law Alumni Association were guests of the School for Homecoming, beginning with breakfast with the Faculty at Lawyers Inn. The annual reception for alumni following the Baylor-SMU football game was held at the Northwood Club.

Mr. Donald C. Fitch, Jr. and Mr. Donald J. Lucas, President and Vice President respectively of the Law Alumni Association, conducted the Law School Fund for the year. A detailed report of the Fund was incorporated in a special issue of The Brief of the School of Law and was mailed to alumni and friends in September 1967. Total gifts from alumni and non-alumni were $61,551.17, which has been used in various forms of student financial assistance. Alumni gifts totaled $30,346.17, with 21 per cent of alumni participating. This percentage of participation must be increased if we are to meet the heavier demands for resources for student aid.

Appendix C sets out the names of the officers and board of directors of the Law Alumni Association and named scholarships awarded for the year.

VIII. Publications

The Southwestern Law Journal and the Journal of Air Law and Commerce are staffed by students under a faculty advisor.

The Southwestern Law Journal published in one issue an annual survey of Texas law to which faculty members contributed the survey articles. This issue was exceptionally well received by the bench and bar. Mention has already been made of the success of the Southwestern Law Journal seminar, which made possible a systematic group analysis and criticism of case notes and comments submitted by students. The result has been to sharpen the presentation of such materials in the Journal. During the year the editorial board and staff of the Journal of Air Law and Commerce, under the leadership of Professors Taubenfeld and Larsen, planned a symposium on the Warsaw Convention for the summer of 1967 which was a highly successful undertaking, drawing representatives from all over the world.

Other publications include The Brief of the School of Law, edited by Professor Rasor and distributed in the fall, spring, and summer, the Law School Yearbook, and a Law School newssheet, called "The Green Sheet."

The Southwestern Legal Foundation continues to edit the Oil & Gas Reporter, which has its editorial offices in Storey Hall, and regularly uses law students on its staff.

IX. Legal Aid Clinic and Dallas Legal Services Project

The School of Law Legal Aid Clinic with Professor Bolton and Miss Sue Goolsby as Director and Assistant Director, respectively, continued to expand during the year, involving a larger number of students in an ever-increasing amount of legal services to the Dallas community.

I reported last year the sponsorship by the Law School of the Dallas Legal Services Project, a project funded by the United States Office of Economic Opportunity through the Dallas County Community Action Committee. After some initial adjustments which were to be expected in connection with such a program of this kind, the various legal service offices were staffed and in operation. Mr. Vincent Rohloff resigned as Director in June 1967 and Mr. Walter Steele became Director. At the end of this first year's operation, the School turned over all management, accounting responsibility, and the like to a newly created Dallas Legal Services Foundation. Members of the faculty are used by the Project as consultants, and students are employed to assist in legal services work.

X. Placement

Placement opportunities for all our graduating seniors continue to be excellent. We are especially pleased to note a steady increase in the number of graduating seniors accepting appointments with the Federal and state courts, departments and agencies of the Federal and state governments, and pursuing graduate studies in law.

XI. The Kilgore Assembly and Other Events

In the Spring of 1966 the President of the University, Dr. Tate, invited a group of students, faculty, trustees, alumni, visiting educators, and friends to a three-day conference at the Kilgore Community Inn in Kilgore, Texas. This conference was designed to explore in depth the problems and challenges facing the University in the years ahead. This conference was so successful that the President suggested that each school of the University plan a similar occasion. I volunteered the Law School as the first to try the experiment.

Accordingly, at the invitation of President Tate, law students, law faculty, trustees, law alumni, and members of the bar and the Federal and state judiciary joined by visiting legal educators met at the Kilgore Community Inn on April 7-9, 1967, to discuss the Law School, the challenges facing it, and its resources to meet the demands of the years ahead. Major statements were made by Professor Myres McDougal of Yale, past President of the Association of American Law Schools; Professor Joseph T. Sneed of Stanford, President-elect of the Association of American Law Schools; Dean Page Keeton of the University of Texas Law School; Dean Richard Maxwell of the University of California at Los Angeles Law School; and Professor Michael H. Cardozo, Executive Director of the Association of American Law Schools. Dean John Wade of Vanderbilt, Dean Louis Toepfer of Western Reserve, and Dean Eugene Kuntz of the University of Oklahoma also participated in the various work groups into which the entire conference was divided for purposes of developing critiques of the School and its role in legal education and in the legal profession.

The entire program was an extraordinary success and generated a continuing wholesome dialogue between students and faculty about the School, its programs, and its future. A similar meeting for one day is now planned for the Spring of 1968.

Participating in lectures on opportunities in the law during the fall semester were:

The Honorable Charles E. Long, Jr., Judge, 134th District Court, Dallas, Texas; David C. Briggs, Esq., Cahill, Gordon, Reindel & Ohl, New York City; Edward A. Copley, Jr., Esq., Goldberg, Akin, Gump, Strauss & Hauer, Dallas, Texas; Marshall G. Martin, Esq., Iden and Johnson, Albuquerque, New Mexico; Joseph J. Lastelick, Esq., Daugherty, Bruner & Lastelick, Dallas, Texas; Edward R. Smith, Esq., Smith & Baker, Lubbock, Texas; Marshall J. Doke, Jr., Esq., Rain, Harrell & Emery, Dallas, Texas; Larry L. Bean, Esq., Jackson, Walker, Winstead, Cantwell & Miller, Dallas, Texas; J. Gordon Shanklin, Esq., Special Agent in Charge, Dallas Division, Federal Bureau of Investigation, Dallas, Texas; The Honorable Barney H. Timmins, Jr., Assistant United States Attorney, Northern District of Texas, Dallas, Texas; W. Forrest Smith, Esq., Legal Department, Mobil Oil Company, Dallas, Texas.

On March 30, 1967, the Supreme Court of Texas made its second visit to the Law School, spending the day in informal discussions with the students about the work of the Court and recent cases. This event is one of the highlights of the academic year, providing, as it does, a warm and pleasant interchange between the judges and students.

On April 12, 1967, Professor Paul G. Kauper of the University of Michigan Law School delivered the Robert G. Storey Lecture entitled: "The Supreme Court: Hybrid Organ of State." Professor Kauper had breakfast with a group of faculty, later attended a coffee reception with students and faculty, then had lunch with a group of students and faculty. His formal paper was presented in the evening at a dinner in the Umphrey Lee Student Center to a group of students, faculty, other members of the University community, and representatives of the bench and bar. The paper is reprinted in 21 Sw. L. J. 573 (1967).

XII. Southwestern Legal Foundation

The Southwestern Legal Foundation is an independent non-profit corporation engaged in continuing legal education on a noncredit, nondegree basis. Members of the faculty serve from time to time on planning committees and as participants in the Foundation's various programs. As the Law School grows in size and as the Foundation increases its activities, both entities seek a better coordination of the work of the Foundation, the Law School, and the University.

XIII. The Order of the Coif

We are pleased to announce that the Order of the Coif granted a charter to the School of Law on January 3, 1967. The Coif chapter replaces the Order of the Woolsack. The names of the first group of students elected to Coif appears in Appendix A. A formal ceremony of installation is planned for the fall of 1967.

XIV. University Administration

I express my sincerest appreciation to the University administration and all of the members of the bar and judiciary who have assisted us in so many ways during this year. We sincerely seek your continued counsel and guidance in grappling with the complex problems that lie ahead.

Appendix C sets out the names of the Law School Committee of the Board of Trustees, the Board of Visitors, and the officers and directors of the Law Alumni Association.

Appendix D is my convocation statement of September 8, 1967.

Respectfully submitted,

Statement of the Dean delivered at the Law School
Convocation on Friday, September 8, 1967

Mr. Chairman, Distinguished Guests, Members of the Faculty, Ladies and Gentlemen

It is my pleasure at this time to open formally this forty-third academic year of the School of Law. The President yesterday opened formally the fifty-third academic year of this University.

We extend to all of you—new students and continuation students alike—a most cordial welcome and express to you for the entire University community the warmest good wishes as you commence or continue your professional studies.

There are as of this time 578 students in residence. There are 207 first year students, representing degrees from 75 colleges and universities. Taking into account all the colleges and universities attended by the first year students other than the schools from which they received their degrees, we have 127 colleges and universities and two foreign universities represented.

The opening of a law school is often an occasion for discoursing on the majesty of the rule of law in the preservation of the liberties of a free people and on the important role of lawyers in the modern world. Somehow, such discourse at this time seems maudlin and hypocritical. In this nation which has prided itself in its people's respect for law, we have witnessed just within the summer past the destruction of life and property so monstrous that even the most tranquilly disposed boggled at the scene. Moreover, at a time when we urge the peaceful solution of international problems under the rule of law, our nation is locked in a cruel and devastating war in far-off Vietnam.

Contemporaneously with these events there have been published during recent months the reports of the President's Commission on Law Enforcement and Administration of Justice. This massive multi-volume work—the first major comprehensive analysis of crime in the United States—is the result of the coordinated efforts of numerous experts under the guidance of a Presidential commission, one of the members of which is Dr. Robert G. Storey who is with us on this occasion. Some 10,000 representative American households were asked about their experiences with crime in America today. The report states in part as follows:

Burglaries occur about three times more often than they are reported to police. Aggravated assaults and larcenies over $50 occur twice as often as they are reported. There are 50 percent more robberies than are reported. In some areas, only one-tenth of the total number of certain kinds of crimes are reported to the police. Seventy-four percent of the neighborhood commercial establishments surveyed do not report to police the thefts committed by their employees.

The existence of crime, the talk about crime, the reports of crime, and the fear of crime have eroded the basic quality of life of many Americans.

The report goes on to state that a "Commission study conducted in high crime areas of two large cities found that:

43 percent of the respondents say they stay off the streets at night because of their fear of crime.

35 percent say they do not speak to strangers any more because of their fear of crime.

21 percent say they use cars and cabs at night because of their fear of crime.

20 percent say they would like to move to another neighborhood because of their fear of crime.

Within the last two years the lower courts and the Supreme Court of the United States have widened the protection afforded the accused in criminal matters. In 1966, Miranda v. Arizona, 384 U.S. 436 (1966), was an important milestone in the developing concepts of the right of the accused to be properly warned and to have, upon demand, the services of counsel during in-custody interrogation. Mr. Chief Justice Warren eloquently tracked the evolution of the privilege against self-incrimination from the early Seventeenth Century in England, thence to the Colonies, and into the Bill of Rights where it was elevated to constitutional status as part of the organic law of our land.

In the last term of the Supreme Court the Gault case, 87 S.Ct. 1428 (1967), also from Arizona, enunciated rules affording additional protection to juveniles in respect to procedures involving the determination of whether or not a juvenile is a delinquent and the possible ensuing consequences of commitment to an institution. The appellants in the case urged upon the Court that, under the Juvenile Code of Arizona, when a juvenile was taken from the custody of his parents and committed to a state institution, he was denied basic rights such as notice of the charges, the right to counsel, the right to confrontation and cross-examination, the privilege against self-incrimination, the right to a transcript of the proceedings, and the right to appellate review. Mr. Justice Fortas, writing for the Court, said that:

The right of the State . . . , to deny to the child procedural rights available to his elders was elaborated by the assertion that a child, unlike an adult, has a right not to liberty but to custody." He can be made to attorn to his parents, go to school, etc. . . .

and then later he said that:

. . . the highest motives and most enlightened impulses led to a peculiar system for juveniles, unknown to our law in any comparable context. . . .

However, he then stated:

Failure to observe the fundamental requirements of due process has resulted in instances, which might have been avoided, of unfairness to individuals and inadequate or inaccurate findings of fact and unfortunate prescriptions of remedy. Due process of law is the primary and indispensable foundation of individual freedom. . . .

Pursuing this line of reasoning, the Court then sustained the appeal of the juvenile and reversed the Supreme Court of Arizona.

Reflecting upon these matters we observe, on the one hand, an ever-widening area of protection afforded those accused of crime, whether adult or juvenile, and, on the other hand, we are made keenly aware of what appears to be an all too serious deterioration of respect for the law. Therefore, one is moved to ask, as we do in law class, can we distinguish these situations? Does this polarity of circumstances present us with a hopeless contradiction? I think we can make a distinction.

A nation cannot abandon its ideals or its sense of idealism, no matter how tough the going is. It must maintain an unswerving, ineluctable commitment to those principles which earn any society its right to respect and its right to continued existence. On the other hand, the practical realities of day to day experience never approach the ideal; indeed, our nation's recent experiences suggest that, instead of moving toward the attainment of our goals, we seem to have defected further from them.

And this is where you come in. For, as students of the law and as lawyers to be, it is your responsibility to interpret the law to the entire community about you, not as dry words on a printed page, not as abstract rules made in a distant time and enunciated by black robed men sitting in a cloistered room in some far off place, but as part of the very fibre of our individual lives, of the community about us, and of all ordered societies. Riots in the streets, crime in the nation, and war in southeast Asia may impede and frustrate our efforts to establish the rule of law; but these events must not deter our efforts nor dampen our enthusiasm to find solutions to the human predicament which can be articulated in private arrangements, in legislation, in executive action, and in judicial decision-making. More and more, we must be interdisciplinarians invoking the skills of the social and physical scientists; we must especially be alert to the emerging new discipline of urbanology. Law is not a negative, telling men what they cannot do; law is a positive, leading men to effect orderly social change.

Here in this Law School you have provided for you the resources to meet these challenges. Here you have the faculty, the library, the facilities, and the program tailored to evoke the best that is in you. Above all, you are in an atmosphere of academic freedom in which spirited and thoughtful controversy can be carried on, rubbing mind against mind to discover truth in all its elaborations. In this connection it is significant for you to know that Dr. Tate, the President of Southern Methodist University, who is here on this occasion, was singularly honored two years ago by the American Association of University Professors, which organization presented him with the Alexander Meiklejohn Award, the Association's highest award, for his role in the preservation of academic freedom. This award symbolizes the spirit of free, unfettered inquiry which pervades this entire campus.

Professor Arthur E. Sutherland in his recently published history of the Harvard Law School gives an interesting description of the study of law under Professor Asahel Stearns who taught at the Harvard Law School from 1817 to 1829, the earlier year marking the formal establishment of the law school as a separate school:

The study of law, or anything else, goes forward prosperously only when the student explores and acquires learning for himself. From medieval times in Europe to the present day in all American faculties of law, an essential part of education has been disputation—some procedure by which the student is required to prepare himself by advance study and then to sustain or attack a ‘thesis’, a proposition, in the face of opposition equally well prepared. Stearns established at Harvard from the first a system of moot courts; for their sessions he posed in advance carefully constructed human situations which, supposedly, had provoked litigious controversy turning on one or several points of law. The students, like law students from time immemorial, prepared themselves by study of the authorities. On the appointed evening (Monday nights seem to have been preferred) those designated as counsel argued the case before a court, sometimes with Stearns as chief justice, sometimes with a student. . . . In due course the chief justice delivered his judgment on the law, and then doubtless commented on the quality of the young men’s advocacy, as his successors in the same School do to this day.

Parenthetically, I should mention to you that in Professor Sutherland’s delightful history of his distinguished Law School, he records the periodic critical evaluations of the School by its students. Their complaints have a familiar ring to those who attend the listening post for student criticisms, and I suppose that we should take some comfort from the fact that an institution with one hundred and fifty years of experience continues to struggle with many of the same problems as others of much younger vintage.

The traditions for law study of which Professor Sutherland writes are carried forward here as elsewhere in the legal educational community. Here you are free to question, to dispute, to argue, to debate, to controvert, keeping ever in mind the common commitment that we all have not only as lawyers, but as educated and responsible citizens to seek the truth with an attitude of mutual respect fortified by a generous supply of good humor. For knowledge tempered by compassion and good will is true wisdom, and concerning wisdom, the Book of Proverbs tells us:

Happy the man who discovers wisdom,
the man who gains discernment:

gaining her is more rewarding than silver,
more profitable than gold.
She is beyond the price of pearls, nothing you could covet is her equal.
(Prov. 3:13-15)

Once again, may I extend to you our sincerest good wishes.
