Appendix A contains detailed information regarding the 1968 degree candidates, honors and awards, and student activities and organizations for the year 1967-1968.

Last year I commented on the widely discussed fiscal crisis in private colleges and universities. As serious as this crisis is at the undergraduate level, it has caused even graver concerns in graduate, professional education. Schools of law all over the country are seeking ways and means to offset the deficits resulting from the academic operation. Even the state university law schools have found the need to supplement their legislative appropriations in order to close the gap between revenue and ever-increasing costs.

This School of Law is not exempted from these fiscal necessities. The Dallas, Fort Worth, and Northeast Texas area is a major metropolitan center experiencing rapid population growth and economic expansion. This area and all the Southwest needs, and will continue to need, well-trained lawyers. The Law School, therefore, has an important role to play. It must provide excellent facilities and a broad-gauged program of legal education; yet its costs cannot be covered by continually increasing tuition; it must depend on endowment, annual giving, and some profits.
from continuing legal education programs, seminars, conferences, sales of published proceedings, and the like. The private law schools may in time be forced to “go public”; that is, they may be taken over outright by the state, or enter into contractual arrangements to provide legal training with state subsidy, or the state may provide tuition grants on long-term, low-interest loans to support the use of private facilities. All of these mechanisms are in use in one way or another in some states and under active consideration in many others.

A major source of revenue for this Law School could be a full scale program in continuing legal education. At present such a program is being offered under the auspices of the Southwestern Legal Foundation, which is a separate and independent entity with its own resources and endowment and which dedicates only a minimal amount of its revenues to the support of the Law School.

We must keep under constant review all the options open to us. Conditions do change and change rapidly and we must be prepared to examine critically all courses which may be pursued. The private school has made a major contribution in our higher educational system. Its independence permits it to experiment and to innovate; it would be a tragedy if it were to be so constrained and restricted as to lose its traditional effectiveness on the American scene.

II. Faculty

Appendix B sets out in detail faculty bibliographies and activities for the year 1967-1968.

New appointments, changes of assignments, leaves, and part-time faculty for the period under review were as follows:

Visiting Associate Professor Robert A. Riegert joined the faculty on September 1, 1967. He holds the Bachelor of Science degree from the University of Cincinnati, the Bachelor of Laws degree from Harvard University, and the Doctor of Laws degree from the University of Heidelberg. He has published in German a book: “American Administrative Law—A Presentation for German Lawyers.” During the year he taught Civil Law, Commercial Law (Civil), Common Market Law, and Problems of Doing Business Abroad. He also taught in the University College during both the fall and spring semesters.

Assistant Professor of Law Harvey Wingo joined the faculty on September 1, 1967. He holds the Bachelor of Arts degree from Birmingham-Southern College and the Master of Arts degree and the Bachelor of Laws degree from Vanderbilt University, where he was Associate Editor of the Vanderbilt Law Review. During the year he taught Crimes, Criminal Procedure, Constitutional Law, Insurance, and Municipal Corporations.

Assistant Dean and Director of Development David W. Purcell joined the administrative staff on September 1, 1967, from the Office of Development at Union College, Schenectady, New York. He holds the Bachelor of Science degree from Denison University and the Bachelor of Laws degree from the University of Texas, where he was a member of the Board of Editors of the Texas Law Review.

Visiting Professor Joseph P. Witherspoon was in residence during the academic year from the University of Texas. He holds the Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of Chicago, the Bachelor of Laws degree from the University of Texas, and the Doctor of the Science of Law degree from Harvard University. During the year he taught Legal Process, Regulation of Business, Regulated Industries, Civil Rights Seminar, and Jurisprudence.

Visiting Professor William F. Fritz was in residence during the summer session 1967 from the University of Texas. Mr. Fritz holds the Bachelor of Arts degree, the Master of Arts degree, and the Bachelor of Laws degree from the University of Texas. He was a Sterling Fellow at the Yale Law School. During the summer session he taught Texas Matrimonial Property Law.

Visiting Professor and Research Scholar Arthur B. White was in residence during the academic year from the office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service, United States Treasury Department. Several years ago, the then Chief Counsel of the Internal Revenue Service, Mitchell Rogovin, invited professors of law to intern for a year or two with the Internal Revenue Service in the Washington office. This experiment was successful, and his successor Chief Counsel, Lester R. Uretz, arranged for an appropriation to permit one of the senior members of his staff to pursue a research project in residence at a major law school. Through arrangements involving the School of Law, the Marshall-Wythe School of Law of the College of William and Mary, and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Mr. White, while in residence, worked on a research project on the subject of exempt organizations. He was assisted by Professor John Donaldson of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law, who was formerly associated with the office of Chief Counsel.

Mr. White holds the Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Laws degrees from Washburn University. He was a Cook Fellow at the University of Michigan Law School and serves as Adjunct Professor of Law at Georgetown University Law School in Washington, D.C. During the academic year he taught Income Taxation and Federal Income Tax Problems of Exempt Organizations.

Professor Jan P. Charmatz was granted a sabbatical leave for the academic year 1967-1968, during which time he lectured at the Institute of Comparative Law of the University of Rome and at the Institute of Anglo-American Studies at the University of Padua in Italy.

Professor Charles W. Webster was granted a sabbatical leave for the academic year.

Professor John L. FitzGerald was Visiting Professor of Law at Hastings Law School, San Francisco, during the summer session, 1967.

Assistant Professors Saul W. Baernstein and Joseph B. Wolens left the School at the end of the year 1966-1967 to be in residence as graduate students in law at Yale and Harvard, respectively, during the academic year.

Visiting Associate Professor Lawrence D. Lee left the School at the end of the academic year 1967-1968 to become Professor of Law at the University of Pittsburgh.

Visiting Associate Professor Richard W. Hemingway left the School at the end of the academic year 1967-1968 to do a year of graduate study at the University of Michigan, after which he will join the faculty of the School of Law at Texas Technological College, Lubbock.

Visiting Associate Professor and Director of the Legal Clinic David Bolton resigned his position effective January 31, 1968, to return to Florida to practice law and to do part-time teaching.

The following part-time lecturers taught seminars or courses during this period:

Adjunct Professor Henry D. Akin, course in Workmen's Compensation; Larry L. Bean, Esq., course in Federal Oil & Gas Taxation; Professor John R. Carrell, course in Law in Society; Edward A Copley, Jr., Esq., together with Herbert S. Kendrick, Esq., course in Tax Procedure and Litigation; Marshall J. Doke, Jr., Esq., course in Government Contracts; Dr. Thomas T. Love, course in Law in Society and Church and State Seminar; D. Carl Richards, Esq., course in Patent Law; Walter W. Steele, Jr., Esq., courses in Crimes and Criminal Procedure; Adjunct Professor Ozro T. Woods, seminar in Medico-Legal Problems; Adjunct Professor Robert S. Glen, seminar in Law and Psychiatry; Donald J. Malouf, Esq., course in Taxation of Business Entities; John H. McElhaney, Esq., course in Texas Practice.

III. Degree Programs

The School of Law operated the following major programs during the year 1967-1968:

(A) The three-year Juris Doctor program in the undergraduate Day Division.

(B) The third and fourth year curricula of the four-year J.D. program in the Evening Division. The Evening Division will phase out at the end of the 1968-1969 academic year.

(C) The general graduate program for both part-time and full-time students leading to the degree of Master of Laws.

(D) The special graduate program sponsored by the Institute of Aerospace Law leading to the degree of Master of Laws.

(E) The graduate program in international and comparative law leading to the degree of Master of Comparative Law.
(F) The graduate program in research and writing leading to the degree of Doctor of the Science of Law.

IV. Curriculum

The curriculum in effect from August 31, 1967, for the Juris Doctor program consisted of 90 hours of required work. During the summer session 1967, 12 sections of courses and seminars were offered, and during the regular session 1967-1968, 144 sections of courses and seminars were offered. Under the course program in effect during the year, the student was required to take a basic curriculum of 36 hours with 54 hours of electives. In selecting elective courses, the student was required to meet certain minimum hour requirements in International and Comparative Law and Jurisprudence, research and writing, and planning courses.

During the year the faculty recommended to the Board of Trustees the conferring of the Juris Doctor degree in place of the Bachelor of Laws degree. This action was approved by the Board and, upon recommendation of the faculty, was made retroactive in the case of all of the alumni of the School of Law who, at the time they received their Bachelor of Laws degree, also held an undergraduate degree.

During the year new offerings included Comparative Criminal Justice offered by Professor Pelletier in the fall of 1967, a seminar in Air Transport Labor Relations offered by Professor Morris in the spring of 1968, a seminar on Federal Tax Problems of Exempt Organizations offered by Professor White in the spring of 1968, and a course in Common Market Law offered by Professor Riegert in the spring of 1968.

V. Law Library and Classroom Expansion

During the year $134,572.06 was expended on the library operation. About 5,848 volumes were added, making a total of 147,344 volumes.

The remodeling work on Florence Hall was completed in the Spring Semester 1968. Downing Allison Thomas and Associates were the architects and Tarpley Construction Company was the general contractor.
The construction of the new law library was begun about June 1, 1968, with scheduled completion in the summer of 1970. Downing Allison Thomas and Associates are the architects, Harper and Kemp are the consulting architects.

During the year I was pleased to announce the commitment of Mr. and Mrs. George M. Underwood, Jr., of Dallas to the new law library in the amount of $1,000,000. This splendid gift makes possible the addition of a major facility which will serve not only our students but also the legal profession and business community of the entire Southwest.

VII. The Hatton W. Sumners Fellowship Program

Hatton W. Sumners, a long time friend of the School, a resident of Lawyers Inn until his death, and a distinguished citizen of Dallas, left the bulk of his estate to the Hatton W. Sumners Foundation, an organization dedicated to the fostering of studies and research in constitutional government. Trustees of the Foundation are Judge Charles E. Long, Jr., J. Cleo Thompson, Esq., Gordon Carpenter, Esq., Judge Alfred P. Murrah, Edwin C. Pannell, Esq., Referee in Bankruptcy, Elmore Whitehurst, and Thomas S. Walker, Esq.

In May 1968, the Foundation resolved to fund a program of fellowships for outstanding college graduates entering upon the study of law. Each fellowship will be worth $3000 per year and will be renewed each year if the holder maintains a high level of scholastic performance. The holder will also have his transportation paid to and from the Law School each year. Candidates for the fellowship must be unmarried, male students under 27 who are residents of, or attending colleges or universities in, the states of Arkansas, Kansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Missouri, Nebraska, New Mexico, and Texas. The program will support fifteen fellowships, five each year, when in full operation.

This magnificent gift will enable the School to attract scholars of the highest caliber, and the trustees of the Foundation are to be congratulated for this major commitment to professional education of quality.

VIII. Alumni

On November 4, 1967, the officers and directors of the Law Alumni Association attended a breakfast at Lawyers Inn as part of Homecoming activities.

Judge Charles E. Long and Mr. Donald J. Lucas, President and Vice President, respectively, of the Law Alumni Association, headed the annual Law School Fund drive for the year. Class representatives were invited to a series of breakfasts during the year not only to make reports on the progress of the Fund in their respective classes, but also to share with the dean and faculty views and comments about the law school operation and legal education generally.

A detailed report of the Fund was incorporated in a special issue of The Brief of the School of Law and was mailed to alumni and friends in September 1968. Total gifts from alumni and non-alumni were $84,036.45, which has been used in various forms of student financial assistance. Alumni gifts totaled $44,264.19, with 36 percent of alumni participating. This percentage of participation is a 50 percent increase over last year’s results. Considering that about 80 percent of the alumni are in classes of the last 10 years, this increasing alumni commitment to the School is a splendid demonstration of loyalty. What is especially significant is that some of the most recent classes showed even a higher percentage of participation than the average. It is also important to note that the faculty of the School of Law contributed generously to the fund.

Appendix C sets out the names of the officers and board of directors of the Law Alumni Association and named scholarships awarded for the year. The total amount of student aid granted from the Law School Fund and other sources was about $125,000.
IX. Publications

The Southwestern Law Journal published again this past year the annual Survey of Texas Law, which was well received. The Journal of Air Law and Commerce sponsored a Conference on Air Traffic Safety which was held in March 1968. As in the case of the previous year’s symposium on the Warsaw Convention, there were representatives from this country and abroad. Comment was highly favorable, and such conferences promise to become a regular part of the Journal’s activities.

Professor Craig and Professor Larsen were faculty advisors to the Southwestern Law Journal and the Journal of Air Law and Commerce, respectively, during the year.

Other publications include The Brief of the School of Law, edited by Assistant Dean Purcell and Professor Rasor and distributed in the fall, spring, and summer, the Law School Yearbook, and the Law School Weekly Bulletin, called “The Green Sheet.”

The Southwestern Legal Foundation continues to edit the Oil & Gas Reporter, which has its editorial offices in Storey Hall, and regularly uses law students on its staff.

X. Legal Clinic

The Legal Clinic was under the direction of Professor Bolton during the summer and fall of 1967. Professor Pelletier was Clinic director during the spring 1968. Policies with respect to the Clinic are set by a joint student-faculty committee chaired by Professor Joseph W. McKnight.

As the services of the Dallas Legal Services Program (a War on Poverty Agency) expand, we will try to emphasize to an even greater extent the instructional and professional facilities of the Clinic and to a lesser degree the community-service aspect of the operation. Thus, in prior years, we handled as large a case load as possible, for we were aware of the fact that, without our efforts, many indigent persons would suffer for lack of counsel. Although the Dallas Legal Aid Society and the legal services personnel of the County Welfare Office offered legal aid to indigents, the combined efforts of all of us were insufficient for the needs of the greater Dallas metropolitan area. Accordingly, the OEO-sponsored Dallas Legal Services Project, by providing a substantial additional legal service office, permits the Law School to turn its efforts to more particularized cases and situations for practice training and instruction in professional responsibility.

XI. Placement

During the year Assistant Dean Purcell began a systematic organization of our placement efforts. These efforts have been singularly successful in bringing our students into contact with a variety of opportunities. The population growth of the area and the economic expansion make for an increasing demand for able lawyers. Our graduating seniors have continued to move into many diverse professional situations.

XII. Inn of the Six Flags and Other Events

An all-day conference on the Law School was held at the Inn of the Six Flags on Saturday, April 6, 1968. This was in large part a follow-up to the previous year weekend conference at the Kilgore Community Inn. Represented were students, faculty, members of the Law School Committee of the Board of Trustees, the Board of Visitors, lawyers, and judges. The students were selected by a committee of the Student Bar Association and represented a cross section of the entire student group.

The group divided into work groups of about twelve to fifteen and reported at the end of the day in a general session. This kind of collective deliberation is extremely valuable in providing a new dimension on problems of policy formulation and execution. Students, faculty, and administration alike gain from this kind of intensive review of operations.

On March 14, 1968, the Supreme Court of Texas made its third visit to the Law School, spending the day in informal discussions with the students about the work of the Court and recent cases. This event is one of the highlights of the academic year, providing, as it does, a warm and pleasant interchange between the judges and students. Mr. Associate Justice Joe Greenhill made the principal statement on the operation of the Court. It was noted that this was the last time that Associate Justices Griffin and Norvell would participate, as both were retiring from the bench after long years of able service to the people of Texas.

On March 25-26, 1968, Professor George Neff Stevens, Visiting Professor at University of New Mexico, made an inspection of the Law School for the Section of Legal Education and Admissions to the Bar of the American Bar Association. This was a routine inspection, the School having been last inspected in 1959.

On April 24, 1968, Chief Justice Roger John Traynor of the Supreme Court of California delivered the Robert G. Storey Lecture entitled “Appellate Process—Some Not So Lost Causes of Action.” Chief Justice Traynor attended a coffee reception with students and faculty, then had lunch with a group of students and faculty. His formal paper was presented in the evening at a dinner in the Umphrey Lee Student Center to students, faculty, and other members of the University community, and representatives of the bench and bar. The paper is reprinted in 22 Sw. L.J. 551 (1968).

On April 26, 1968, the President of the Association of American Law Schools, Professor Joseph T. Sneed of Stanford University, visited with the entire Law School faculty at a luncheon.

XIII. University Administration

I express my sincerest appreciation to the University administration and all of the members of the bar and judiciary who have assisted us in so many ways during this year. We sincerely seek your continued counsel and guidance in grappling with the complex problems that lie ahead.

Appendix C sets out the names of the Law School Committee of the Board of Trustees, the Board of Visitors, and the officers and directors of the Law Alumni Association.

Appendix D is my convocation statement of September 6, 1968.

Respectfully submitted,

Statement of the Dean delivered at the Law School Convocation on Friday, September 6, 1968

Mr. Chairman, Distinguished Guests, Members of the Faculty, Ladies and Gentlemen:

It is my pleasure at this time to open officially the academic year of the School of Law. President Tate formally opened the 54th academic year of the University yesterday, and this is the beginning of the 44th year of this Law School. We extend to all of you, new students and returning students alike, a most cordial welcome and express to you on behalf of the faculty and staff of the Law School our warmest good wishes.

There has been some decline in our enrollment this year. There are at this time 550 students in residence in the School of Law as compared with 581 this time last year. There are 161 first-year students representing 66 colleges and universities as compared with 207 students representing 75 colleges and universities in last year’s first-year class. The Selective Service Act has taken its toll here as it has in all law schools throughout the country. We are cooperating as fully as we can with all our students in making arrangements with local draft boards to permit completion of as much work as is possible, consistent with current rules.

We have observed in the past month two major national political parties going through the process of selecting Presidential and Vice Presidential candidates and adopting platforms to which the parties subscribe for the future. Watching the convention in Chicago was a traumatic experience, I am sure, for all of us as we observed the contradiction of views of the news media, the mayor of the city, the law enforcement authorities, and the demonstrators and protestors. Reflecting upon this tawdry scene made me keenly aware of what has been called the communication gap, the credibility gap, and the generation gap, and how easily the forces of disruption and disorganization can fasten themselves upon any group.

Incidently, two movies, now currently showing and extraordinarily popular, speak to the same problems. The Graduate is directed to the communication gap between generations, a gap which is, as it is presented, so wide and deep that the most sedulous efforts of old and young cannot bridge it effectively.
Rosemary’s Baby tells the story of the presence of evil in the world, evil that is not merely the absence of what is good, noble, honorable and decent, but evil which is itself a pervasive, powerful, aggressive force set loose to destroy and devour. For those of you who have not seen this picture, I will not disclose to you the ending, but I will wager you that however many endings you may speculate upon, the real one is not likely to be one of them.

Considering these matters, it seems to me that as we enter upon another academic year there is no more important characteristic of our legal educational experience than to understand the careful, thoughtful, deliberative analysis of facts and their precise and accurate communication to others. This is the special contribution that lawyers have made and can make to the society —the capacity to take facts which are related by clients and by witnesses in garbled and jumbled fashion, put them together in an orderly description of an event in order that decisions can be made with respect to the right result and precepts can be set for the future to regulate similar transactions.

There has never been a time when the processes of negotiation, arbitration, and compromise of differences have been more important than in the present time. Despite all our technological advances, however, the analysis of facts and their accurate transmission, communication, and dissemination become ever more difficult. This is because of the almost insuperable problems caused by rapid change. Those who begin Law School here this year will reach their maturity in the profession by the year 2000.
Then they will be the senior partners in law firms, the general counsel of corporations, the judges on the bench, and the teachers of law in the law schools. The imagination is staggered by the changes which will have taken place by that time. As Dean Francis Allen of the University of Michigan Law School stated in a recent article in the Virginia Law Review, we are being plunged headlong into what is described as the “technetronic society.” The role of science and technology becomes increasingly more significant, and the slower, more cumbersome processes of our legal institutions will have to change to meet the pace. Recently at the American Bar Association meeting in Philadelphia, Judge John R. Brown, Chief Judge of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, gave some startling and dramatic statistics of the work of the various Federal Circuit Courts of Appeal and the prospects for their work load by the year 2000. From the case load which is presently before the Circuits, Judge Brown has extrapolated a load factor which would require that by 2000 almost every state have its own Circuit. Correspondingly, the number of Federal District Judges will be multiplied many times over. He raised the question of whether or not the judicial machinery under such proliferation of courts would break down and called upon the profession to look ahead, to plan ahead, and to find those ways and means through technology to systematize the collecting of opinions, the channeling of information to the profession, and the more rapid solution of legal problems. What he says, of course, about the Federal courts is equally applicable to the state courts. The nine-member Supreme Court of Texas and the three-member Court of Criminal Appeals have carried the load of the legal business on the civil side and the criminal side, respectively, as courts of last resort. Lawyers will have to decide how this load can be handled with the prospect of the doubling or trebling of the population of this state by the time the students who are in this Law School are serving as mature, senior members of the profession.

Judge Charles Wyzanski in a talk recently before the University of New Mexico Law School on the subject of the law of change, made a special point of describing the criminal process in the Criminal Courts of first instance in London. He tells of sitting in the Marylebone Street Court on December 23, 1967, and listening to the magistrate disposing of cases. In each case, he says that the defendant’s rights were scrupulously protected, but the offenses for which the defendants were being tried on December 23 had occurred the day before—December 22! Such rapid disposition of cases is almost incredible to us, and yet the nation which gave us our legal system does this in normal course with fairness and justice.

A more rapid disposition of the business of lawyers will require some systematic division of labor. Lawyers traditionally have prided themselves on being generalists and have tended to shy away from the practice of certification of specialties as has been the case in the medical profession. Moreover, lawyers have avoided the use of sub-professionals and technical assistants in the way the medical profession has done. Looking ahead, our attitudes on these matters may have to change. The training of sub-professionals and of technical assistants may have to be undertaken by law schools or other institutions if the legal profession is to survive with the kind of autonomy and independence which we think is best for the profession in a free society.

Even in the case of the mechanics of the use of words in the drafting of statutes, the filing of briefs, the argument of cases, and the preparation of documents, there is the constant demand for simplicity in expression. This is not a new concern, and lest we be discouraged about our progress on this front, one should note that this was one of the life-long aspirations of Thomas Jefferson, that is, to see codes and statutes in the simplest possible form. At thirty-three years of age, when he was chairman of a committee to revise the laws of Virginia after the Declaration of Independence, he and his committee pledged itself to draft short bills, not to insert an unnecessary word, nor to omit a useful one. He wrote to his friend, George Wythe:

In its style I have aimed at accuracy, brevity and simplicity, preserving however the very words of the established law, wherever their meaning had been sanctioned by the judicial decisions, or rendered technical by usage. The same matter if couched in the modern statutory language, with all its tautologies, redundances and circumlocutions would have spread itself over many pages, and been unintelligible to those whom it most concerns. Indeed I wished to exhibit a sample of reformation in the barbarous style into which modern statutes have degenerated from their antient [sic] simplicity.

When he was seventy-four, he was still assiduously campaigning for simplified legislation. Forwarding a draft of a bill to establish elementary schools, he said:

I should apologize, perhaps, for the style of this bill. I dislike the verbose and intricate style of the English statutes, and in our revised code I endeavored to restore it to the simple one of the ancient statutes, in such original bills as I drew in that work. I suppose the reformation has not been acceptable, as it has been little followed. You, however, can easily correct this bill to the taste of my brother lawyers, by making every other word a “said” or “aforesaid,” and saying everything over two or three times, so that nobody but we of the craft can untwist the diction, and find out what it means; and that, too, not so plainly but that we may conscientiously divide one half on each side. Mend it, therefore, in form and substance to the orthodox taste, and make it what it should be; or, if you think it radically wrong, try something else, and let us make a beginning in some way. No matter how wrong, experience will amend it as we go along, and make it effectual in the end.

Whether it be greater simplicity in legal documents and statutes, better efficiency in the administration of justice, or creating new legal arrangements to solve the problems of a world in rapid change, the challenges before us are formidable, and I especially charge you to consider them seriously. For if we fail to be constantly alert to the problems of meeting the rapid changes in our society through changes in legal institutions, other professions, sciences and technologies are going to pass us by. The problems of the human predicament in a world of rapid change have to be met and if lawyers can’t meet them through the processes of orderly development of legal institutions, other disciplines will devise means for their solution. Our profession has responded to the needs of our nation in the past, and, as I told the entering class at their orientation week before last, there is no limit to the opportunities which lawyers have in the present to serve the public. Nor is there any reason to believe that we shall default in meeting the obligation of service which is placed upon us. Therefore, for the thorough preparation for these many opportunities for service, I confidently entrust you to your professors and the work of this academic year—and, of course, I extend to you again my warmest good wishes.
