REPORT OF THE DEAN
To the President, Members of the Board of Trustees, Members of the Board of Visitors, Faculty, Students, Law Alumni, and Friends of the School of Law of Southern Methodist University:

On May 31, 1981, the School of Law completed its fifty-sixth academic year, and I completed my first as its Dean. Despite the challenges faced by legal education throughout the United States, it was a year of growth and progress for the School on many fronts: faculty, students, academic programs, research, and public service. As the new Dean, I have been acutely conscious throughout the year that our progress has only been possible because of the School's exceptionally strong foundations due to the efforts of my predecessors, Deans Charles S. Potts, Robert G. Storey, John W. Riehm, and Charles O. Galvin, as well as those of Dean ad interim A. J. Thomas, Jr., who served with extraordinary dedication in the two years prior to my appointment.

Recognizing that no academic institution can advance in today's environment without well-defined goals and a planned course of action, the School of Law during 1980-81 engaged in a massive effort involving faculty, students, administration, and the legal profession, to prepare a five-year plan for its further development. The Plan, entitled Directions for the Eighties and covering virtually every aspect of Law School operations, was submitted to the President in September 1981. It will become the basis for a major development effort at the School during the period 1981-86.

Other notable events of the year included:
- the endowment by alumnus William L. Hutchison, '55, of the George W. Hutchison Chair of Energy Law.
- the increase in first-year admissions applications to an all-time high of 1,642, over 17% above those received in 1979-80.
- the advancement in faculty publications and service to the profession with the preparation of 14 books and monographs, 59 articles, and 83 speeches and lectures off campus.
- the receipt of nearly $1.2 million in gifts to the School.
- the inauguration by U.S. Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti of the Alfred P. Murrah Lecture Series, endowed by the Hatton W. Sumners Foundation.
- continued service to the legal profession through major symposia, including those in taxation, air law, and products liability which attracted national audiences.

The pages that follow will seek to describe in greater detail the progress and achievements of the past year.
The School of Law is fortunate to have a dynamic faculty committed to excellence in teaching, research, and service to the legal profession. During the academic year 1980-81, full-time faculty members in residence numbered 26. In addition, Associate Dean for Academic Affairs Henry J. Lischer, Jr., Associate Dean for Clinical Education Walter W. Steele, Jr., and I each taught the equivalent of one-half the teaching load of a full-time professor. Due to a few unfilled teaching positions and the leaves of absence of certain faculty members as visiting professors at the Universities of Michigan and Virginia and as a scholar in residence at the U.S. Department of Justice, the School had a faculty/student ratio of 1/31.5, which I consider to be unacceptably high. The School therefore engaged in an active recruitment effort through its newly created Faculty Appointments Committee, chaired by Professor Robert Brousseau, and looks forward to an improved situation in 1981-82. It should also be noted that the School's Five-Year Plan, Directions for the Eighties, set a principal goal of reducing the faculty/student ratio to 1/24 by 1986.

Like most law schools, SMU faces a major challenge in recruiting and retaining high-quality faculty members, particularly in view of the increasing differential between university salaries and compensation levels in private practice. The University administration has shown concern over this issue and has provided increased resources for faculty salaries for 1981-82.

The School was also pleased to have had the services of four visiting professors during the year. They were: Visiting Associate Professor C. Paul Rogers (B.A., 1970; J.D., 1973, University of Texas; LL.M. 1977, Columbia University), on leave from Loyola University in Chicago, who taught Contracts I and II, Business Torts, and Antitrust Law; Visiting Associate Professor Larry E. Ribstein (B.A., Johns Hopkins; J.D., University of Chicago), on leave from Mercer University, who taught Business Associations I and II and Torts I and II; Visiting Assistant Professor Jeffrey N. Pennell (J.D. and B.A., Northwestern), on leave from the University of Oklahoma, who taught Trusts and Estate Planning; and Visiting Professor Joseph Jude Norton (A.B., 1966, Providence College; LL.B., University of Edinburgh; LL.M., 1978, University of Texas; S.J.D., 1973, University of Michigan) who taught Property II and American Corporate Law Survey. Professors Ribstein and Pennell returned to their respective home schools, while Professors Rogers and Norton continued at the School for 1981-82.

The School also lost two faculty members during the year. Associate Professor Richard B. Schiro resigned at the end of the Fall Semester 1980 to devote full time to family business, and Professor William P. Streng resigned at the end of the Spring Semester 1981 to enter the private practice of law in Houston.

In addition to the full-time faculty, the educational program of the School was deeply indebted to experienced practitioners who taught seminars and courses on a part-time basis during 1980-81. Their names and the courses they taught are listed in the appendix to this report.

The entire faculty attained high levels of productivity in teaching, research, and public service during 1980-81. A brief glance at the summary of their selected activities, contained in the Appendix to this report, gives cause for pride in the School's achievements during the year and hope for continued progress in the future. Collectively, they produced 14 books and monographs, published 59 articles, and delivered 83 speeches and lectures off campus. Moreover, their concern for excellence in teaching resulted in the preparation of 15 volumes of teaching materials for use at the School.

Members of the faculty also served on national boards and committees, testified before legislative bodies, assisted in drafting legislation, and participated in continuing legal education programs from California to Connecticut.

Special mention must be made of the continuing contribution of our retired faculty members in residence to the School and to the law. Professor Emeritus Lennart V. Larson taught Property I and II; Professor Emeritus Roy R. Ray completed the third edition of The Texas Law of Evidence; and Professor Emeritus John L. Fitzgerald completed a study for the American Bar Association.

Faculty productivity, both in and outside the classroom, requires resources and a continuing concern for faculty support and development. Toward this end, the School, with the cooperation of the University administration, was able to provide additional funds for research assistants and professional travel, and it also installed a modern word-processing system to serve the academic program. The faculty inaugurated a monthly Faculty Forum, administered by Professor Earl C. Borgeson, to permit colleagues to present research in progress or new developments in the law for consideration and discussion. Five programs were held, covering topics from interest arbitration to class actions.

Despite commitment to research, the School's first priority remains excellence in teaching. In recognition of this fact and due to the generosity of an alumnus, it has established the Dr. Don M. Smart Teaching Prize, which each year will provide an award to the best classroom teacher at the School. The prize of $3,000 will be awarded for the first time in May 1982.

Further concern for the well-being of our students was evidenced by the creation of a new advisory system, coordinated by Professor William J. Bridge, whereby twelve members of the faculty volunteered to act as advisors to small groups of first-year students.
During 1980-81, the School of Law enrolled a total of 838 students as follows:

1st year: 257
2nd year: 235
3rd year: 216
Graduates and Auditors: 101
Specials: 2
JD/MBA: 14
JD/MPA: 3
Transients: 10

Women students numbered 274, foreign students 26, and minorities (blacks, Mexican-Americans, and native Americans) 19.

The School has renewed its efforts to diversify its student body and hopes, as part of its five-year development plan, to increase the number of minorities. These efforts include the creation of an ad hoc Committee on Minority Recruitment, active recruitment of minority students through publications and personal contacts, and increased financial aid. In this respect, the creation in 1981 by the Dallas Bar Association, with funding from the Dallas Bar Foundation, of a Diversity Fellowship for an SMU law student will give significant impetus to this effort. The School expects to award this fellowship, which covers tuition, room, board, and books, for the first time in 1982.

The J.D. class entering in the Fall of 1980 had a mean LSAT score of 615 (81st percentile) and a uniform grade point average of 3.35 (on a scale of 4). These students came to the School from thirty-three states and one foreign country, and they had completed their undergraduate studies at 102 different colleges and universities — 22 in Texas, 79 in other states, and 1 in a foreign country.

Applications for admission to the Law School continued to increase and the mean LSAT scores of entrants continued to improve. Indeed, during 1980-81, the School received 1,642 applications for admission in August 1981, the highest in its history and a 17% increase over the number received during 1979-80. The number of students admitted to the 1980 entering class was slightly more than is desirable; consequently, the School intends to accept somewhat fewer students (approximately 240) next year. Our Five-Year Plan recommends that the first-year class be limited to 225 students. The following chart on applications and entrant scores during the last few years gives an indication of the basic trends.

The School is mindful of the fact that nationally the twenty-two year old population, from which it primarily draws its students, will begin to decline in 1983 and that it must therefore increase its efforts at student recruitment.

ACADEMIC PROGRAM

The principal programs of the School of Law are the three-year Juris Doctor (J.D.) program, requiring ninety hours of course work, the Master of Laws ( LL.M.) program, requiring 24 hours of course work, and the Master of Comparative Law ( M.C.L.), requiring 24 hours of credit. In addition to the research degree of Doctor of the Science of Law ( S.J.D.), the School of Law offers two joint degree programs: the J.D./MBA degree in cooperation with the Edwin L. Cox School of Business, and the J.D./MPA degree in cooperation with the Graduate Program in Public Administration of Dedman College.

In the 1980-81 academic year, the School conferred 202 J.D. degrees, 13 LL.M. degrees, and 20 M.C.L. degrees. The chart on the next page reflects comparative data with respect to degrees conferred during the period 1970-1981.

The Juris Doctor program remains the core of the School’s educational mission. The curriculum during the regular school year consisted of 161 sections of courses and seminars, and the summer session included 8 sections of courses and seminars. The faculty is acutely conscious of the current debate on the necessity for increased training in the skills of lawyering and the need to adapt legal education to meet societal needs; consequently, the curriculum is constantly under review. During 1980-81, the School added four new courses: they included Copyright and the Protection of Literary and Artistic Property offered by Professor Lackland H. Bloom, Jr.; International Tax Seminar offered by Walter W. Brudno, Esq.; Legislation offered by Professor Joseph W. McKnight; and Expert Testimony offered by Professor Roark M. Reed, an interdisciplinary offering to law and medical students, presented in cooperation with Southwestern Medical Center.

The legal clinics, which give students an opportunity to work on real cases, are an important part of the J.D. program. Associate Dean Walter W. Steele, Jr. continues to exercise overall supervision of our clinical components which consist of the Civil Cases Clinic, the Criminal Justice Clinic, the Federal Taxpayers Clinic, and the Legal Extern Program.

Assistant Professor Maxine T. McConnell-Tobin serves as Director of the Civil Cases Clinic, assisted by Ms. Cynthia M. Hollingsworth, Associate Director. Forty students enrolled in the Civil Cases Clinic this year and handled 200 cases covering a broad spectrum of civil legal business. The Criminal Justice Clinic, directed by Professor Roark M. Reed, set a new record with 50 jury trials for the year and has now accumulated several cases on appeal.

The Shell Oil Company provided a grant of $45,000 to continue funding the Federal Taxpayers Clinic, and Mr. Bruce Hart became the Clinic’s Director. This year, 18 law students held 123 consultations and over 50 IRS Audit Conferences. The first law school clinic whose students are permitted to appear before the U.S. Tax Court, the Taxpayers Clinic continues to serve as a model for law schools across the country, and the Internal Revenue Service has now officially referred to the SMU model as a national standard.

The Legal Extern Program enabled 22 students last year to gain experience through observation in various governmental offices.

The Master of Laws program enrolled a total of 21 full-time and 54 part-time students, nearly all of whom were seeking a specialization in
The M.C.L. program, now thirty years old, attracted foreign students from throughout the world, including the first person from the People's Republic of China to seek a law degree in the United States.

In addition to formal courses, the Law School seeks to enrich the educational experience of its students in many other ways. In the fall, U.S. Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti inaugurated the Alfred P. Murrah Lectures Series, endowed by the Hatton W. Sumners Foundation, with his lecture on “Congressional Regulation of Executive Power,” and he also conducted a special seminar with students. In the spring, Professor Irving Younger spoke on “Ulysses in the Court Room” at the 3rd Annual Roy R. Ray Lecture.

A further innovation was the creation of a tutorial program to enable first-year students to gain the study skills necessary for success in law school.
In addition to degree programs, the School through its Center for Advanced Professional Development offers a broad range of educational opportunities in domestic and international legal and commercial fields through courses, seminars, symposia, and publications. During the past academic year, the Law School held symposia on taxation, estate planning, family law, mental health, product liability, and antitrust law. Its second Annual Product Liability Symposium attracted nearly 250 lawyers from thirty-five states, and it published, in cooperation with Matthew Bender and Company, Uniform Product Liability Act (edited by Professor Vincent S. Walkowiak), the proceedings from its First Symposium. Other Center publications included the proceedings of the School’s Third Annual Tax and Estate Planning Symposia edited by Associate Dean Henry J. Lischer, Jr. and published by the Tax Research Institute of America, and the supplementation, under the editorship of Professor Beverly M. Carl, of the two-volume treatise Doing Business in Mexico, published by Matthew Bender and Company.

From time to time, the Law School co-sponsors programs of mutual interest with the Dallas Bar Association, an organization with which it has a close relationship. This year, one such program, co-chaired by Professor Daniel W. Shuman, focused on mental health law.

The School of Law publishes two student-edited law reviews, the Southwestern Law Journal and the Journal of Air Law and Commerce. Although a member of the faculty acts as advisor to each review, their operation and management are vested in their respective Boards of Editors composed of senior students who have exhibited exceptional ability in legal research and writing. In both publications, the work of students produced periodicals of permanent value to the legal profession.

The Southwestern Law Journal, advised by Professor J. Scott Morris, publishes five issues each year and reaches law schools, attorneys, and judges in the United States and abroad. It had a circulation of 1,600 in 1980-81. Each year one issue of the Journal is devoted to an annual Survey of Texas Law and contains articles by attorneys, law professors, and judges concerning current developments in the laws of Texas.

The Journal of Air Law and Commerce, advised by Professor Vincent S. Walkowiak, is a quarterly publication founded in 1930, and has been at SMU since 1962. In 1980-81, it attained a worldwide circulation of 2,400.

On April 24, 1981, the Journal of Air Law and Commerce also organized the 15th Annual SMU Air Law Symposium, which attracted over 550 lawyers, business executives, and government officials.
Other student activities, in addition to the law reviews, afford SMU law students important and valuable professional training. They include the Moot Court Program, the Mock Trial Program, and the Legislative Drafting Center.

The School’s Moot Court Program, advised by Professor Roy Ryden Anderson, continued at a high level of activity during the year. A School team, sponsored by the Dallas firm of Winstead, McGuire, Sechrest & Trimble, participated in the 1980 Texas Young Lawyers Association Moot Court Competition, where it won the round-robin competition, while losing in the semi-finals. In the Region X National Moot Court Competition, the School’s Hughes & Hill National Moot Court team was designated to represent the region in the National Finals in New York City in January, where it advanced to the semi-final round, before being eliminated by the team that ultimately won the competition.

The Shank, Irwin, Conant, Williamson & Grevelle International Moot Court Team, advised by Professor William J. Bridge, represented the School in the 1981 Philip C. Jessup International Law Moot Court Competition.

In addition, the School conducted its annual intramural competition, sponsored by the Dallas firm of Jackson, Walker, Winstead, Cantwell & Miller, which was won by the team of Bonnie G. Cade and Sherri L. Turner. Ms. Molly D. Buck received the Russell M. Baker Memorial Award as the senior law student who made the outstanding contribution for the academic year to the work of the Moot Court Board.

Mock trial activities, which teach students advocacy skills, took place through the Mock Trial Club and through national competitions. Under the sponsorship of Professors Frederick C. Moss and Vincent S. Walkowiak, the School’s team, sponsored by the Dallas firm of Strasburger and Price, participated in the National Mock Trial Competition. For the first time, a team from the School, sponsored by Frank L. Branson, a Dallas trial attorney, participated in the Association of Trial Lawyers of America Competition. The SMU Mock Trial Club began its third year of existence with its annual intramural competition sponsored by the Dallas firm of Geary, Stahl and Spencer.

The year 1980-81 saw the establishment of the Legislative Drafting Center at the School. Advised by Professor Joseph W. McKnight, the Center is a student-run organization designed to provide legislators, municipalities, and public interest groups with technical assistance in statutory drafting. In its first year of operation, the Center, assisted by a grant from the ABA, worked on four projects, one of which, an amendment to the Texas Antiquities Code, became law.
Underwood Law Library

The Underwood Law Library remains one of the School's most valuable assets. At the end of the academic year, its total collection numbered 270,328, ranking it 22nd among the 169 law libraries at schools accredited by the ABA. It acquired 10,935 new volumes during the year and received 68 gifts in kind, including 4,802 books, 1,239 periodicals, and 420 pamphlets. Underwood is both a community and a University resource, and it is therefore open to members of the legal profession. During 1980-81, persons not affiliated with the School made approximately 1,000 visits a month to the library. The legal and business community, for its part, has also provided strong support for Underwood. The 1980-81 Law Library Fund Drive, chaired by Marshall J. Doke, Jr. and co-chaired by Stephen C. Mahood, yielded $30,117 for the acquisition of new materials.

Placement

Former students of the School achieve remarkable success after graduation. Their passing rate on the Texas Bar Examination has invariably been high and was most recently illustrated by the fact that of the 165 SMU graduates taking the July 1980 examination, 164 passed it. Their success in securing employment is also high. As of January 1, 1982, 195 members of the class of 1981, out of a total of 198 reporting their status, had obtained employment.

The Placement Office, which assists students in finding positions, has experienced a significant growth in its activities over the years. Since 1978, the number of firms recruiting at the School has increased 40%. During 1980, 210 firms, nearly 25% of which were from outside Texas, visited the School to conduct 2,801 separate interviews. The following chart may illustrate the growth in placement activity.

At the end of the academic year, Mrs. Lillian Blair retired as Director of Placement after 13 years of dedicated service to the careers of our students and graduates. Mr. John H. McMurphy replaced her in that position.
ALUMNI AFFAIRS, LAW SCHOOL FUND AND FINANCIAL SUPPORT

My first year as Dean gave me the opportunity to travel to Houston, Fort Worth, Tyler, Oklahoma City, Tulsa, El Paso, Austin, and San Antonio to meet many alumni. Their strong and enthusiastic support for the School was most encouraging. The annual reception for Houston area alumni was hosted by Mr. and Mrs. Blake Bart in April at their home, where I met nearly 90 area alumni and talked to them of developments at the School. At the State Bar Convention in Houston, the Law Alumni Association held a reception at the Shamrock Hilton for law alumni from throughout the state. During the entire year, the Law Alumni Council, under its able President Gene W. Francis, continued to provide strong and active support to the School.

Mr. A. Hardcastle served as Chairman of the 1980-81 Law School Fund. In addition to a solicitation by mail, he headed a telefund at the Law School which ran for 11 nights in the fall, and involved 75 alumni as solicitors. Under his direction, gifts to the Law School Fund totaled $163,397. All contributions to the Law School Fund, unless otherwise designated by the donor, are restricted to provide financial assistance to students in the form of tuition grants.

The Sixth Annual Law Library Fund of 1980-81 was chaired by Marshall J. Dole, Jr. All law firms and practitioners in Dallas were asked to support the Law Library on the basis of $50 per lawyer (the approximate cost of one book). For the first time, the Law Library Fund solicitation was expanded to include area corporations with Stephen C. Mahood serving as co-chairman for Corporate Giving. Dallas attorneys and corporations responded with gifts totaling $31,217, an increase of 71% over the previous year.

Total financial support to the School in 1980-81 amounted to $1,196,004.35, as compared to $1,011,986.88 the previous year. A comparative summary of gifts received appears on the opposite page.

Several gifts should be particularly noted. William L. Hutchison '55, Chairman of Texas Oil and Gas Corporation, endowed the School's second chair, the George W. Hutchison Chair of Energy Law, which will strengthen our expertise in the energy field. Dr. Don M. Smart '63, a physician and lawyer, made a substantial gift to the School to establish the Dr. Don M. Smart Legal Education Endowment, and David G. McLane '66, a partner in the firm of Gardere & Wyne, created the Alfred E. McLane Endowment in honor of his father. The Hatton W. Sumners Foundation, a generous and consistent supporter of the School, increased the endowment for its scholarship program which fully supports fifteen scholars at the School each year.

The School's moot court and mock trial programs have also received significant support from area law firms and individual attorneys. In addition to Frank Branson '69, the firms sponsoring these various programs and teams include Geary, Stahl & Spencer, Hughes & Hill; Jackson, Walker, Winstead, Cantwell & Miller; Shank, Irwin, Conant, Williamson & Grevelle; Strasburger & Price; Val, Hamilton, Koch, Tubb, Knox & Stradley; and Winstead, McGuire, Sechrest & Trumble.

Law School alumni Judge David D. Jackson '67 and the firm of Tolsbowski & Schlinger also made significant contributions to the School this year. In addition to alumni and law firm support, the Shell Oil Company continued its generous funding of the Federal Tax Clinic for another two years.

We are continually grateful to the many firms, corporations, foundations, and individuals who have contributed to the School during this past year. Each gift is important to the School and its students. A list of endowed chairs, scholarships, fellowships, prizes, and awards is included as an appendix to this report.

The School's five-year development plan emphasizes the need to increase Law School endowed funds in the years ahead, particularly with respect to chairs, professorships, fellowships, and the library. In order to provide funds for faculty support and development, we have also established the Endowment for Faculty Excellence this year, and it has thus far been the recipient of approximately $25,000 in gifts.

My first year as Dean of the School of Law has been an exhilarating time, a time of activity and challenge. It has also been a special privilege to have worked with a dedicated and highly talented faculty and administrative staff. Associate Deans Lisbon and Steele provided invaluable service in the administration of all aspects of our academic program, and Associate Dean for External Affairs Edward Coutelas energetically carried out heavy responsibilities in student recruitment, development, and continuing legal education. In addition, Doris Beale, Assistant to the Dean, Jean Jury, Director of Admissions, and Fred Taylor, Financial Officer, continued to make their well-recognized, essential contributions to the life of the School.

My first year as Dean has also been a profound learning experience, as I have come to know better the School, its faculty, its students, its alumni, and the bench and bar. With this knowledge has come the realization of how truly strong the School is, and I hope that these pages have conveyed a sense of that reality in some small measure. While major challenges undoubtedly lie ahead for the School and for American legal education in general, I firmly believe that the School of Law of Southern Methodist University is ready to meet them and to advance to even higher levels of excellence. Respectfully submitted,

Jeswald W. Salacuse
Dean

The faculty attained high levels of productivity in teaching, research, and public service during 1980-81. A brief glance at selected activities of each faculty member, in order of length of service, gives cause for pride in the School's achievements during the year and hope for continued progress in the future:

CHARLES O. GALVIN, Professor of Law, (B.S.C., 1940, Southern Methodist University; M.B.A., 1941; J.D., 1947, Northwestern University; S.J.D., 1961, Harvard University) taught courses on income taxation, property security, corporate taxation, estate planning, and taxation and fiscal policy. A member of the American Law Institute and recognized authority on taxation, his publications during the year included Will Manual (Tex. ed. 1981) and “Wills and Trusts” in the Annual Survey of Texas Law, 35 S.S.J. 21 (1981). He also served as an officer of the American Bar Association Section on Legal Education and Admissions to the Bar. He spoke on selected aspects of taxation at numerous professional programs.

ALAN R. BROMBERG, Professor of Law, (B.A., 1949, Harvard University; J.D., 1952, Yale University) taught Securities Regulation and Corporate Planning. He also completed the 1981 supplement (with Lewis D. Lowenthal) of Securities Fraud & Commodities Fraud, which included a 308-page chapter on investigations and enforcement by the SEC, the CFTC, and self-regulatory organizations.
