INTRODUCTION

To the President, Members of the Board of Trustees, Members of the Board of Visitors, Faculty, Students, Graduates, and Friends of the School of Law of Southern Methodist University:

The 1983-84 academic year was the 59th in the history of the School of Law of Southern Methodist University, and my fourth as its Dean. While the year was characterized by significant activity and progress at the School, it was also a time of assessment and appraisal. The impetus for assessment and appraisal was the regular reinspection of the School of Law by the American Bar Association and the American Association of Law Schools. As an institution approved by the American Bar Association and as a member of the Association of American Law Schools, SMU Law School is subject to a reinspection every seven years.

Prior to the reinspection, the faculty and administration engaged in a critical self-study of virtually every aspect of the School. For us, the purpose of the self-study was not merely the satisfaction of an ABA requirement. More important, it was an opportunity to examine our progress in meeting the goals of our Five-Year Plan, Directions for the Eighties, adopted in 1981, and to begin to formulate new goals for the future. As part of the self-study process, twelve task forces prepared position papers on a wide range of important issues, including student recruitment and admissions, faculty development, research and publications, graduate legal studies, curriculum, and continuing legal education. The faculty then considered the reports in a retreat held at Lake Texoma, November 11-12, 1983. The consensus of the retreat was that the School had made significant progress toward achieving the goals stated in the Five-Year Plan and in many cases had already attained objectives ahead of the scheduled 1986 completion date. On the other hand, in certain areas such as recruitment of women and minority faculty members and the development of interdisciplinary courses and seminars, the faculty recognized that increased effort would be necessary.

The reinspection of the School, conducted by a five-person team headed by Professor Roger C. Cramton, former Dean of the Cornell Law School, took place on March 3-7, 1984. During the visit to campus, the team examined virtually the entire Law School operation and met with faculty, students, alumni, and representatives of the bench and bar. The resulting report by the team was extremely positive and affirmed the fact that SMU Law School is indeed a quality institution of legal education. With this endorsement, we look forward to continued progress in the years ahead.

After reviewing the other events of the year, I am pleased to report to you that the School is growing in strength and quality and that we continue to advance toward our goal of making the SMU Law School one of this country's preeminent institutions of legal education and research. The following are a few of the other highlights of 1983-84:

- The establishment by William L. Hutchison, '55, of the Hutchison Scholarship Program providing 10 full-tuition scholarships a year.
- The construction of a new courtroom, thanks to a grant from the Fair Foundation.
- The establishment of an appellate clinic and a clinic for legal services to the elderly.
- The creation of the Robert Hickman Smellage, Sr. Endowed Graduate Tax Scholarships.
- The inauguration of the annual SMU Touche Ross Tax Lecture Series.
- The completion of the most successful annual campaigns in the School's history on behalf of the Law School Fund and the Law Library Fund.
- The receipt by the School of total annual and endowment gifts in excess of $2.2 million.
- The organization of the first SMU Law School in Oxford Program, held in the Summer of 1984.
- The completion of the School's largest and most successful series of continuing legal education programs.

The following pages will describe in detail the activities of the 1983-84 academic year.
n unusually large number of visiting professors, both from the United States and from abroad, taught at the School during the 1983-84 academic year, and their presence served to enrich the intellectual life of the faculty in very special ways. Our foreign visitors included: Visiting Assistant Professor Werner F. Ebke (B.A., Gymnasium Carolinum at Osnabriick, J.D., Doktor der Rechte (Ph.D.), University of Muenster School of Law, LL.M., University of California at Berkeley) on leave from the University of Muenster, West Germany; and Visiting Assistant Professor Christine Diana Gray (B.A., Ph.D., Newnham College, Cambridge University) on leave from St. Hilda's College, Oxford University. A noted scholar and former diplomat, Covey T. Oliver (B.A., J.D., University of Texas, LL.M., S.J.D., Columbia University, LL.D., Southern Methodist University) spent the spring semester at SMU as Visiting Professor of Law and University Distinguished Scholar in Residence, and Professor Stephen F. Williams (B.A., Yale University, J.D., Harvard Law School), on leave from the University of Colorado, became the first person to be appointed Visiting George W. Hutchinson Professor of Energy Law.

Other visiting appointments in 1983-84 included Visiting Professor Daniel Q. Posin (B.A., University of California at Berkeley, M.A., J.D., Yale University, LL.M., New York University (in taxation) on leave from Hofstra University, Visiting Associate Professor Sanford M. Guerin (B.S., Boston University, J.D., University of San Francisco School of Law, LL.M., New York University School of Law) on leave from the University of Denver School of Law; and Visiting Professor John S. Lowe (B.A., Denison University, LL.B., Harvard Law School) on leave from the University of Tulsa College of Law.

One of the reasons for the unusually large number of visiting professors was the fact that several of the School's permanent faculty members took leaves of absence to engage in research and scholarly activities. In the 1983 Fall Semester, Professor Charles J. Morris was on sabbatical leave to undertake a comparative labor law study and to write two major articles on domestic labor law. Professor Regis W. Campfield was on sabbatical leave during the 1984 Spring Semester to prepare a casebook on wills & trusts. Professor Joseph W. McKnight took a sabbatical leave for the academic year, part of which he spent in Spain, to complete his article on the "Spanish Law of Succession in the United States." Professor Daniel W. Shuman spent the academic year at McGill University, Canada, to continue his research on the psychotherapist-patient privilege. Professor Howard J. Taubenheim took sabbatical leave for the Spring Semester 1984 to complete his five-volume collection of materials on the status of women in international law and to begin writing a treatise based on this material. Also in the Spring, Professor Harvey Wingo was on sabbatical leave in Canada to do research and write in the area of comparative constitutional law.

During the academic year 1983-84, full-time faculty members at the School numbered thirty-two. In addition, Associate Dean for Academic Affairs U. Paul Rogers, Associate Dean for Clinical Education Roark M. Reed, and I each taught the equivalent of one-half the teaching load of a full-time professor. As a result of new appointments to the faculty and a slightly reduced entering class, the School had a faculty/student ratio of 1:16.8, an improvement over the ratio of 1:28 which existed in 1982-83 and the ratio of 1:29 that prevailed in 1981-82. The reduced faculty/student ratio has enabled us to enrich our educational programs, and we continue to strive toward the goal set by our Five-Year Plan of reducing the faculty/student ratio to 1:24 by 1986.

The faculty continued to attain high levels of productivity in teaching, research and public service during 1983-84. A brief glance at the summary of their activities, contained in the Appendix to this report, gives cause for pride in the faculty's achievements and promise for continued progress in the future. I would point particularly to the continuing and growing outpouring of books and treatises, articles in nationally recognized journals, and papers presented at conferences, which the faculty produced in 1983-84 as in previous years. Together, faculty members published 14 books and 41 articles in 1983-84, in addition to numerous teaching materials produced for classroom use at the School.

Despite the faculty's commitment to research and public service, its first priority remains excellence in teaching. Each course taught at the School is subject to a careful evaluation, and I am pleased to report that the evaluations for 1983-84 show that our faculty members are a group of outstanding teachers. In recognition of its commitment to teaching, the School annually awards the Dr. Don M. Smart Teaching Award, a cash prize of $3,500 to the best classroom teacher, based on a poll of students in the School as well as alumni who have recently graduated. The winner of the Award for 1983-84 was Professor Henry J. Lischer, Jr., a specialist in the law of taxation, who also received the honor of being selected as Professor in Residence in the Chief Counsel's Office of the Internal Revenue Service, Washington, D.C., where he will spend the 1984-85 academic year.

Recognizing that important educational benefits are derived from our directed research program, the School also awards the Dr. Don M. Smart Prize for Directed Research to the best directed research paper prepared during the year. For 1983-84, it was awarded to Professor Regis Campfield and LLM. student Sylvia M. Burgess for her paper "All You Ever Wanted to Know About Cafeteria Plans But Were Afraid to Ask."

The Faculty Forum Program, initiated in 1981 and administered by Associate Dean C. Paul Rogers during 1983-84, held ten sessions during the year. Designed to allow faculty to discuss their work in progress and to provide a forum for distinguished visitors, the Faculty Forum normally takes place over lunch in the Faculty Dining Room and has become a significant part of the intellectual life of the School. The presentations included:

Roark M. Reed  "Experience of a Fulbright Professor in Japan"
Richard A. Booth   "The New Law of Freeze-Out Mergers"
Beverly M. Carl    "The New Legal Structure in Nicaragua"
Leon Trakman      "Commercial Law — Yesterday and Today"
Stephen F. Williams "Natural Gas: From Shortage to Glut in Three Quick Years"
Werner F. Ebke    "In Search of Alternatives: Comparative Reflections on Corporate Governance and the Independent Auditor's Responsibilities"
Laura Nader       "Harvard Law School in the 1980s"
Joseph W. McKnight "The Staying Power of Spanish Law in North America"
Charles J. Morris  "NLRB Deferral to the Arbitration Process"
Covey T. Oliver  "A.D. 1789, 1989 and 2001: Our 18th Century Construction and Foreign Affairs in the 21st Century"

In addition to the full-time faculty, the educational program of the School owes much to the experienced practitioners who taught seminars and courses on a part-time basis during 1983-84. A group of lawyers with high academic and professional achievements, they forge an indispensable link between theory and practice at the SMU Law School. Their names and the courses they taught are listed in the Appendix to this Report.
THE STUDENT BODY

The School of Law enrolled a total of 838 students during 1983-84. They were distributed among the various years and programs as follows:

In accordance with our Five Year Plan, we deliberately reduced the size of the 1983 entering class so as to improve the faculty/student ratio and give each student a more personalized education.

Women students numbered 322 and accounted for 40 percent of the student body. Foreign students numbered 24 and minorities (Blacks, Mexican-Americans, and native Americans) 68. As stated in our Five-Year Plan, one of the goals of the School is to diversify the student body, and we continued to make progress toward this end in 1983-84, as compared to 1981-82 and 1982-83 when 34 and 45 minority students, respectively, were enrolled at the School. Increased recruitment activity and augmented financial aid have been principal causes of these results. Of particular importance in this respect is the Sarah T. Hughes Minority Fellowship Program, created by the Dallas Bar Association with funding from the Dallas Bar Foundation.

SMU's own minority students have actively participated in student recruitment. A particularly innovative activity in this area was the Minority Student Recruitment Conference, organized in the Spring of 1983 at the Law School by the Black Law Students Association and the Hispanic American Law Students Association.

The J. D. class entering in the fall of 1983 had a mean uniform grade-point average of 3.32 (on a scale of 4), and a mean Law School Admissions Test Score of 37, which equalled last year's average as the highest in the history of the School of Law. These first-year students came to the School from 34 states and Mexico, and they completed their undergraduate studies at 96 different colleges and universities — 21 in Texas and 75 in other states.

The Master of Laws (LL.M.) program enrolled a total of 39 full-time and 59 part-time students, most of whom specialized in taxation. The Master of Comparative Law (M.C.L.) program included 22 foreign lawyers from 15 countries.

In 1983-84, the School received 1,603 applications for admission to the J. D. program for August 1984. The following chart summarizes the application process during the year as compared with the six previous years. As you will note, the number of applications received for entry in August of 1984 was approximately 5.8% less than the number received for entry in August of 1983. During the last two decades, applications to law school grew dramatically due to the "baby boom," that generation of 76 million Americans born between 1945 and 1964. As that generation aged and as the birth rate in the United States declined, law schools expected that the number of annual applications would begin to fall in 1983-84. That decline did indeed take place. Throughout the country, U.S. law schools received 12% fewer applications in 1983-84 than they had in 1982-83. Although SMU Law School experienced a less severe decline, it was not totally immune from this phenomenon. Fortunately, the quality of our entering class, as measured by the LSAT score, remained the same as in the previous year.

Since 1981, the School has been preparing for a reduced applicant pool by strengthening its student recruitment efforts in various respects. In 1983-84, our recruitment program included visits by staff, faculty, and students to colleges and universities around the country, and the development of new publications and video presentations to explain the School to future law students. In addition, the School held its third Conference of Pre-law Advisors from leading colleges and universities, April 12-13, 1984, on the campus of the Law School. Attended by advisors from Rice University, Colorado College, University of Pennsylvania, New York University, Boston College, Texas A&M University, University of Notre Dame, Indiana University and Brigham Young University, the Conference sought to introduce the participants to the School's programs, faculty, students and facilities.

On the other hand, we must acknowledge that the School's level of tuition, which was $7,766 in 1983-84, remains a matter of concern in recruiting the type of student body we seek. While tuition increases in recent years have been accompanied by programmatic improvements, a high tuition may preclude many talented persons from attending SMU unless they receive financial assistance. Thanks to increased giving by alumni and friends of the School, our financial aid program has grown substantially. In 1983-84, total scholarship assistance to our students amounted to approximately $900,000. We also launched two new scholarship programs: the Hutchison Scholarship Program, made possible by a gift from William L. Hutchison '55, which will provide 10 full tuition scholarships a year, and the Robert Hickman Smellege, Sr. Graduate Tax Scholarship Program that will support two LL.M. students a year. In addition, loans to SMU law students from various sources in that same year amounted to $2,122,000. In the years ahead, financial assistance will become increasingly important in maintaining the traditionally high quality of the SMU student body.

*The LSAT adopted a new scoring scale in 1983.
Principal programs of the School of Law are the three-year Juris Doctor (J.D.) program, requiring 90 hours of course work, the Master of Laws (LL.M.) program, requiring 24 hours of course work, and the Master of Comparative Law (M.C.L.) program for foreign lawyers, requiring 24 hours of credit. In addition to those programs and to the research degree of Doctor of the Science of Law (S.J.D.), the School of Law offers a joint-degree program, the J.D./MBA degree, in cooperation with the Edwin L. Cox School of Business.

In the 1983-84 academic year, the School conferred 220 J.D. degrees, 45 LL.M. degrees, and 24 M.C.L. degrees. The following chart reflects comparative data with respect to degrees conferred during the period 1974-1984.

The curriculum during the regular school year consisted of 185 sections of courses and seminars, and the 1983 summer session included five sections of courses and seminars. During 1983-84 the School added three new courses: Energy Law I and II taught by Visiting George W. Hutchison Professor of Energy Law Stephen F. Williams; Legal Imagination taught by Professor William J. Bridge and Dr. Faith Williams; Oil and Gas Contracts taught by Visiting Professor John S. Lowe; and Taxation of Property Dispositions taught by Professor Henry J. Lischer, Jr.

Prior to the beginning of the academic year, Professor Walter W. Steele, Jr., who had served the School exceptionally well since 1975 as Associate Dean for Clinical Education, resigned to return to full time teaching. Professor Roark M. Reed, who had recently returned from a Fulbright Professorship in Japan, replaced him in that position.

The clinical program, under the supervision of Associate Dean Reed, continued to give students an opportunity to work on real cases while providing a service to actual clients. It consisted of four components: the Civil Cases Clinic, the Criminal Justice Clinic, the Federal Taxpayers Clinic, and the Legal Extern Program.

The Civil Cases Clinic, directed by Assistant Professor Maxine T. McConnell-Tobin, handled more than 330 clients with problems ranging from consumer issues to domestic relations. Ms. Brenda Garrett served as Associate Director of the Civil Cases Clinic. Students represented clients in District, County and Justice Courts and before administrative agencies. Clinical students filed three cases in federal district courts and argued three cases before the Court of Appeals.

During 1983-84, the students in the Criminal Justice Clinic handled a total of 618 cases, including 31 jury trials. This Clinic continues to deal successfully with misdemeanors in Dallas County, and has established itself as an integral part of the Dallas County criminal justice system. The Clinic received important commitments of support from the Meadows Foundation and the Fikes Foundation.

The Federal Taxpayers Clinic, directed by Bruce B. Hart, enabled students to have firsthand experience in providing assistance to citizens subject to audit by the Internal Revenue Service. During 1983-84, the Tax Clinic examined a total of 180 cases and accepted the representation of 92 clients. It remains a model, recognized by the I.R.S. and the U.S. Tax Court, for similar clinics in the country. The operation of the Tax Clinic was supported principally by a grant from the Shell Oil Corporation.

Through the Legal Extern Program, a total of 32 students gained experience in government and business offices off campus.

In 1983-84, plans were made and funding sought for two new clinics: an Appellate Clinic to handle both Civil and Criminal Appeals and a Clinic for Legal Services to the Elderly. By the close of the academic year, the former had been funded by the U.S. Department of Education and the latter by the Legal Services Corporation. Thus, both will become a part of the academic program in 1984-85.

courtroom in Florence Hall, thanks to a generous grant from the Fair Foundation. This new facility, which will supplement the existing courtroom, is designed to be multi-purpose and will be used for training in arbitration and negotiation, as well as in the traditional forms of litigation.

Several distinguished scholars and jurists visited the School of Law during the year. They included Professor John Kaplan, Jackson Ely Reynolds Professor of Law at Stanford University, who delivered the annual Roy R. Ray Lecture entitled "Can Capital Punishment be Efficient?"; Professor Laura Nader, from the University of California at Berkeley who delivered the annual Alfred P. Murrah Lecture entitled "A User's Theory of Law"; Justice Richard Neely, of the West Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals, who delivered the Charles O. Calvin Lecture entitled "How Courts Govern America"; Chief Justice Clarence A. Guittard and Associate Justice Gordon H. Rowe from the Court of Civil Appeals — Fifth Supreme Judicial District; Terence F. McCarthy, Executive Director of the Federal Defender Service for the Northern District of Illinois; Colonel Don Peterson, former astronaut of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, and Irving Younger, Esq., formerly with Cornell University and currently with a Washington, D.C. law firm, both of whom spoke at the Eighteenth Annual Symposium of The Journal of Air Law and Commerce. Chief Justice Jack Pope of the Supreme Court of Texas addressed the candidates for the Hatton W. Summers Scholarship Program at a dinner in the Spring semester, and United States Senator John Tower also spoke to the Hatton W. Summers Scholars at a dinner in the Spring semester. The Honorable Barefoot Sanders, United States District Judge for the Northern District of Texas, sponsored by the Hispanic-American Law Students Association (HALSA), addressed the Law School student body during the Spring semester.

The 1983-84 academic year also witnessed the inauguration of the Touche Ross Tax Lecture Series. Gerald Padwe, Associate National Director of Tax Seminars for Touche, Ross & Co., one of the "big eight" Certified Public Accounting firms in the United States, delivered the first lecture in the annual tax lecture series.

And finally, the School inaugurated the SMU Law School Program at Oxford University in the Summer of 1984. Organized by Professors Peter Winship and Joseph W. McKnight, this program was designed to allow students to benefit from the tutorial system, a mainstay of the educational process at Oxford.

The School conducted its most successful and extensive continuing legal education program, both in terms of the number of programs presented and the number of persons in attendance. The Continuing Legal Education Office presented nine programs, virtually all of which closely involved faculty of the Law School. These programs included: a Short Course on Antitrust Law and Litigation, held in Colorado Springs, July 11-15, 1983; the Second Annual Institute on International Finance, November 9-10, 1983; a Short Course on the Law of the National Labor Relations Act, December 5-9, 1983; the Sixth Annual Estate Planning Institute, January 26-27, 1984; the Fifth Annual Symposium on Product Liability, held in Houston, February 23-24, 1984; the Eighth Biennial Texas Family Law and Community Property Symposium, March 8-9, 1984; a Multi-State Labor Law Seminar, April 6-7, 1984; and the Sixth Annual Symposium on Federal Tax Planning, May 31-June 1, 1984. Together, these nine programs attracted a record number of 1,521 participants representing forty-six states and nine foreign countries. Speakers included leading authorities from throughout the United States and six foreign countries.

In November 1983, following the resignation of Randolph T. West, Elaine Flynn was appointed Director of the Continuing Legal Education Office. In developing programs, Ms. Flynn and her staff worked in close cooperation with the Faculty Committee on Continuing Legal Education, chaired by Professor Walter Steele.

On March 1-3, 1984, the Journal of Air Law and Commerce presented its Eighteenth Annual SMU Air Law Symposium at which Colonel Donald Peterson of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration delivered the keynote address to more than 500 participants from throughout the United States and six foreign countries. On March 22-23, 1984, the Law School organized a conference on International Law and the Future World Order in cooperation with the University of London, the University of Muenster, the American Society of International Law, and Oceana Publications. Held on the SMU campus and dedicated to the memory of the late Professor A. J. Thomas, Jr., the Conference was attended by many well-known American and foreign experts on international law. At the conclusion of the Conference, a portrait of Professor Thomas was unveiled in Storey Hall.

The School also hosted the Southern Regional Program of the National Institute for Trial Advocacy for the fourth consecutive year. Directed by Professor Frederick C. Moss, the NITA Southern Regional is an eleven-day program, held on the SMU campus each June, to train young lawyers in litigation skills. In 1984, seventy-two lawyers, representing 8 states, attended the course as students, and twenty-six lawyers and judges from six states participated as faculty. Representing SMU on the 1984 Faculty were law Professor Vincent S. Walkowiak, Associate Dean Roark M. Reed, and Ms. Brenda J. Garrett, Associate Director of SMU's Civil Cases Clinic.

The Law School continued to publish its two student-edited law reviews, which serve as both sources of information to the profession and training grounds in legal scholarship for students. The Southwestern Law Journal (founded in 1947), which was advised by Professor Harvey Wingo in the Fall Semester and Professor Roy R. Anderson in the Spring Semester, published six issues during the year, including its very popular Annual Survey of Texas Law and a special issue devoted exclusively to taxation. It had a circulation of approximately 1,300 subscribers. The Journal of Air Law and Commerce (founded at Northwestern University in 1930 and moved to SMU in 1961), advised by Associate Dean C. Paul Rogers, published four issues during the year and had a worldwide circulation of 2,100.
The Continuing Legal Educational Office presented nine programs closely involving Law School faculty.
The Moot Court and Mock Trial Programs train students in skills of advocacy.
In addition to the law reviews, numerous other student activities afford SMU law students important and valuable professional training.

The Moot Court Program, advised by Professor Roy Ryden Anderson, is designed to train students in the skills of appellate advocacy. The annual intramural competition, sponsored by the Dallas firm of Jackson, Walker, Winstead, Cantwell & Miller, involved nearly the entire first year class and was won by the team of Gregory K. Ackels and Michael Bass. Jean Gilliland and Sandy Stephenson were runners-up. Ms. Stephenson was selected as outstanding advocate. Thomas M. Bollon, III, and Martha Freeman McKenzie received the Russell M. Baker Memorial Award for outstanding contributions to the work of the Moot Court Board.

SMU was also active in interschool moot court competition. In the Texas Young Lawyers Association State Moot Court Competition held in conjunction with the 1983 Convention of the State Bar of Texas, the School was represented by a team sponsored by the Dallas firm of Winstead, McGuire, Sechrest & Minick. Brad N. Gahm, James Gilson and Pamela Buchmeyer Aymond composed the team. Mr. Gahm was selected the outstanding advocate in the Competition. In the Region X National Moot Court Competition held in Houston, Texas, the School was represented by a team sponsored by the Dallas firm of Hughes & Hill. Messrs. Gahm and Gilson and Ms. Aymond again composed the team. The team qualified to represent the region in the National Finals in New York City in January. At the National Finals, sponsored by the Young Lawyers Committee of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, the team advanced to the quinterfinal round. The School of Law also participated in the National Appellate Advocacy Competition. Two teams, composed of Christine R. Cole, James Gilson, and Sarah Page, and Jon B. Burgin, Robert Green, and Mike Uhl, represented the School of Law. The regional competition was sponsored by the School of Law and was attended by teams representing law schools in Texas and Louisiana. In future years, the teams representing the School in the National Appellate Advocacy Competition will be sponsored by the Dallas firm of Passman, Jones, Andrews & Holley.

The Law School also participated in the Southwest Regional of the 1984 Phillip C. Jessup International Law Moot Court Competition, a two-day event with five schools participating, which was held in Houston, Texas. SMU was represented by the Shank, Irwin and Conant International Moot Court Team, advised by Professor William J. Bridge, Robert D. Allen, Cynthia A. Corcoran, John W. Greene, Jo Bess Jackson and Thomas W. Shaw composed the team.

The School's 1983-84 Mock Trial Program consisted of several events. In the fall, the Trial Advocacy Club, which was advised by Professors Frederick C. Moss and Vincent S. Walkowiak and funded by the Geary, Stahl and Spencer law firm, held its sixth annual intramural mock trial competition. The competition involved over 100 students from all classes. In the spring, the Trial Advocacy Club sponsored the weekly Trial Film Festival, and the School sent student mock trial teams to the ABA competition in Lubbock and to the Association of Trial Lawyers of America Competition in Houston. The two ABA teams were sponsored by the Dallas firm of Shroshburger & Pace, and ATLA team was funded by Dallas trial attorney Frank L. Branson (69).

The Law School Follies played to a full house in McFarlin Auditorium, on February 25, 1984. Law students under the leadership of Angie Dale, Paula Lock, Derry Swanger and Brian Blakey, produced an excellent and witty show entitled "Terms of Indictment," which satirized the law, the legal profession, and most of all, the faculty.

Placement

The School's Placement Office serves three groups: law students, law graduates and prospective employers. One of its primary activities is the on-campus recruiting program which provides employers an opportunity to interview students for summer clerkships and associate positions. The Office also assists students in obtaining part-time employment during the academic year.

During 1983-84, the Placement Office initiated an information session, especially for first year law students, to explain the recruiting process. It also inaugurated a monthly newsletter to inform registered alumni of current employment opportunities. Over one hundred SMU graduates have subscribed to this publication. Evidence of strong interest in SMU students and alumni is manifested by increasing numbers of job listings submitted to the Office.

Demand for SMU graduates continued strong, reflecting growth of opportunities within law firms, corporate legal departments, and governmental units, particularly within the Sunbelt area of the country. During 1983-84, two hundred thirty-two firms conducted over 4,300 interviews. An additional 25 employers unable to visit the school invited students to submit resumes for consideration. Data collected from respondents to an employment survey of December 1982 and May 1983 graduates showed that nearly 60% remained in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, while another 23% selected other Texas locations. SMU graduates are practicing in 48 states and sixty-five foreign countries. The 1983 graduates located in seventeen states and the District of Columbia. Nearly 70% chose employment in private practice, 14% accepted positions with corporate employers. 6% chose government positions, and 10% accepted federal and state judicial clerkships.

At the end of the academic year, Mr. John McMurphy resigned as Director of Placement to return to law firm administration.

Underwood Law Library

The Underwood Law Library remains a crucial support for the entire law school enterprise. The reinspection of the Law School by the American Bar Association reaffirmed the strength of this fine information resource.

During the year, the Library added 11,675 volumes, to bring the total collection size to 304,248 volumes - a major legal research collection in the United States. Some 30 friends also contributed 5443 volumes, 185 pamphlets and 2,319 periodical issues for the enrichment of Library resources.

Underwood Library is extensively used by students, faculty, and the legal profession. During the year, there were 240,535 individual entries into the Underwood Law Library. Reference services replied to 32,633 research inquiries - 11,528 from off-campus users. Approximately three-quarter million photocopies were made - a further indication of the magnitude of use of the library.

On June 22-24, 1983, Underwood Library hosted the Annual Institute of the American Association of Law Libraries - an event which gave law librarians from throughout the country an opportunity to visit the Law School facilities. The staff also prepared another fine bibliography - Doing Business with the People's Republic of China - 1983.

The year ended on a further positive note - the achievement of the Library's second $100,000 endowment fund. The Peggy and Charles O. Galvin Book Fund was established by the Student Bar Association in 1979. Through a generous challenge gift of George M. Underwood, Jr. and the late Nancy Underwood, and a matching gift of Professor and Mrs. Galvin, along with other substantial contributions, the Fund total was brought to this new level.
During the year, the Underwood Law Library added 11,675 volumes, to bring the total collection size to 304,248 volumes — a major legal research collection in the United States.
Total annual gifts to the school amounted to $602,153, an increase of 21.5 percent over the contributions received in 1982-83.
The year 1983-84 witnessed the most successful Law School Fund and Law Library Fund campaigns in the School's history. Total annual gifts to the School amounted to $602,153, an increase of 21.5 percent over the contributions received in 1982-83.

C. Ted Raines, Jr. '63 chaired the 1983-84 Law School Fund, which yielded $273,910 in gifts from alumni, all of whom are listed in the appendix. Under Mr. Raines' direction, the Law Alumni Telefund was conducted for nine nights in October by 92 alumni solicitors who telephoned their classmates directly from Lawyers Inn. An innovation in the Law School Fund in 1983-84 was the organization in Houston and Fort Worth of local telefunds, an effort which will be expanded to other major communities next year. The 1,838 alumni (nearly 32 percent of the School's total) who contributed to the Fund made an average gift of $149.03.

Contributors to the Fund again were given the option of designating their gifts to areas of special interest. They responded with designations to student scholarships ($275,141), faculty support ($55,683), clinical education ($12,019), support of the Law Library ($73,857), and areas at the Dean's discretion ($20,230).

In the ninth annual Law Library Fund, the Dallas/Fort Worth metropolitan legal community contributed $83,295, an increase of 11 percent over the previous year. Leading the campaign in support of the Underwood Library were William E. Collins, who chaired the Law Library Fund for Dallas firms and attorneys, Richard J. Agnich, chair for Dallas Corporate counsel, and alumnus Allan Howeth '63, who was chairman for attorneys in Fort Worth and Tarrant County. Baron S. Smith was chair for corporations in Fort Worth and Tarrant County.

Support from law firms, attorneys, friends, organizations, and foundations significantly strengthened the School's Moot Court ($15,632) and Trial Advocacy ($11,500) programs, discussed above. Contributions for awards totaled $26,415. The Shell Companies Foundation committed an additional $45,000 to assist in maintaining the School's Tax Clinic. The School also received $1,699,438 in additions to endowment, including the final payment of $500,000 of the $1,000,000 commitment to endow the Rupert and Lillian Radford Chair of Law. Total gifts to the School in 1983-84 amounted to $2,211,611. A comparative summary of gifts to the School follows.

The Law Alumni Association Council provided significant leadership throughout the year under its President, John P. Falconer, Jr. '65. At its Annual Meeting near the end of the year, the Council created additional opportunities for alumni activity through the adoption of an extensive committee structure.

Numerous SMU Law School alumni events were held during the year, and I was pleased to have an opportunity to attend most of them. In June 1983, at the annual convention of the State Bar of Texas, the School honored Blake Tatt '59, incoming president of the State Bar of Texas. That same month, the Class of 1958 held a reunion.
in Dallas. Evelyn H. Biery '73 in October again hosted a luncheon for San Antonio area alumni. Also in October, the Honorable Max N. Osborn '53 hosted a reunion for members of his class in the El Paso area. Fort Worth alumni were invited to a reception in April hosted by Alton O. Head '71. In May, Blake Tartt '50 and his wife, Barbara, held a reception at their home for graduates in the Houston area.

The first organized effort by the School to provide an on-campus class reunion program was begun in January. Throughout the year, alumni from appropriate class years held reunion meetings. In October, the class of 1952 met in Dallas as a result of the interest of Jerry N. Jordan '52. In April, Larry V. Smith '73 and Emily A. Parker '73 organized a dinner for the class of 1973. The Special Events Committee of the Law Alumni Council is now making plans for a regular program of reunion meetings.

We have also sought to strengthen alumni ties with the School by devoting increased resources and efforts to improving the content and format of The Brief, the School's semi-annual alumni magazine.

Respectfully submitted
