EDITORS' PREFATORY NOTE

This special Symposium Issue of LBRA on "Challenges and Opportunities in Mexico: Implications for US-Mexico Relations" is derived from the biennial international conference held on the SMU campus on March 25-26, 2010 through the joint sponsorship of the Jno.E.Owens Memorial Foundation and Southern Methodist University and its John G. Tower Center for Political Studies. Professor Luigi Manzetti of the SMU Department of Political Science took the main responsibility for organizing this interdisciplinary event and for bringing together a stellar international group of participants. He was assisted by a Planning Group comprising, Prof. James F. Hollifield (Director of the Tower Center), Dr. Kathleen Cooper (Professor of the Practice in Political Economy and Associate Director of the Tower Center), Dr. Carole J Wilson (Executive Director of Tower Center), Prof. Thomas Osang (SMU Dept. of Economics), Prof. Joseph Norton (SMU Dedman School of Law), and Ms. Noelle McAlpine (Associate Director for Academic and Administrative Affairs of Tower Center).

This Symposium issue consists of selected conference papers presented at the above conference. Because of the interdisciplinary nature of the papers, the journal editors have retained the form of citations and organization used in the specific discipline, provided they were used consistently throughout the papers. The various recent regional developments and casenote following the Symposium papers in this issue are not part of the Symposium, but are the regular student contributions by the LBRA/ILRA student staff.
