Introduction

JOHN F. MURPHY*

As I noted in the Editor's Preface to International Legal Developments in Review: 1998,¹ because of space limitations it was decided to defer publication of the foreign law contributions until the fall issue of The International Lawyer. The wait has been worth it. This year's foreign law contributions cover a great variety of significant developments from legal systems around the world.

Especially noteworthy is the substantial overview of "Vietnam's Legal Framework for Foreign Investments" by Pham Van Thuyet.² This is the first time that the Foreign Law issue has featured a contribution on Vietnam, and Pham Van Thuyet has provided an extensive road map to the intricacies of investing in a country that some predict will become a new "Asian Tiger."

Andrew Joshua Marcus, chair of the Comparative Law division of the Section of International Law and Practice, deserves special credit for his successful encouragement of contributions from his division. I also want to thank Peter Winship, who shared editorial responsibilities for this issue with me and provided general guidance as Editor-in-Chief. Special thanks also go to Elizabeth Raines, Senior Managing Editor, and to the Student Editorial Board of The International Lawyer for their excellent final editing and cite checking. Norman Gross, ABA Publishing Managing Editor, coordinated the production work in this issue.

Last but not least, I am grateful to my secretary, Mrs. Terri LaVerghetta, for her fine work on this project.

As always, I would be pleased to receive any comments and suggestions readers of this review may have. My mailing address is: Professor John F.
