COMPETITION IN THE REGULATED INDUSTRIES: TRANSPORTATION

By Carl H. Fulda

533 Pages

$20.00

"Transportation is a highly readable, carefully documented survey not only of the court and agency decisions in the subject field, but of the history of industry conditions which constitute an indispensable background for understanding the challenging public problem of accommodation of our anti-trust and regulatory philosophies."
Eugene T. Liipfert, ICC Practitioners Journal.

"The book reflects painstakingly careful scholarship, incisive and critical analysis, and a clear perspective of antitrust and regulatory law . . . constitutes a major contribution to a better understanding of the complex problems of competition versus regulation in the transportation industry. Every person interested in our national transportation policy, every anti-trust lawyer who deals with regulated industry problems, and every lawyer who must advise carriers, freight forwarders, or shippers would be wise to study it carefully."
Glen E. Weston, Northwestern Law Review

"The book comes at a most opportune time, for it brings into sharp focus the basic considerations underlying many of the most critical and controversial issues in transportation today . . ." Everett Hutchinson, Commissioner, Interstate Commerce Commission, Washington, D.C., Texas Law Review
