The Journal extends its congratulations to Associate Professor Charles W. Webster, the Journal's Faculty Advisor, who has been named Professor of Law, and to Assistant Professor Joseph W. McKnight, who was designated Associate Professor of Law. Professor Webster has been with the School for the past three years, and Professor McKnight has been with us since 1955. Visiting Assistant Professor Alan R. Bromberg has also joined the permanent faculty as an Assistant Professor. He was formerly with the firm of Carrington, Gowan, Bromberg, Johnson and Leeds.

We are also pleased to announce that visiting Professor Paul Oberst and Visiting Assistant Professor Richard B. Amandes will be associated with the Law School during the summer term. Professor Oberst is a member of the faculty at the University of Kentucky School of Law. Mr. Amandes was formerly at the University of Washington, and will join the staff at the Law School of the University of Wyoming this fall.

In this issue of the Journal appear three of the papers delivered at the Sixth Annual Institute on Labor Law, which was held on our campus April 24-27. We trust that the readers will find them as interesting as they are informative. Also in this issue are articles on double fractions in Oil and Gas Law and a discussion of some aspects of Texas Family Law.

Your attention is directed to the advertisement in the opening pages of the Journal; the Law Library is attempting to complete its sets of certain books listed there. If you have any of these volumes, a letter would be appreciated.
