Parker School Summer Program in Foreign Law

The eighteenth annual summer program in foreign law of the Parker School of Foreign and Comparative Law will be held during the period of June 3 through June 28, 1974 at the Columbia Law School in New York City.

The objectives of the program are essentially the same as in previous years. They are to give the participants a firm foundation for advising their clients and for dealing with foreign counsel in those areas of foreign law that are of most importance to Americans doing business abroad. Matters covered will include (a) methods of analyzing the legal climate of a country and of dealing with foreign governmental authorities; (b) the principal forms of organization for doing business abroad; (c) important areas of foreign law, such as jurisdiction of courts, judgments, procedure, contracts, property, agency, and corporations; (d) the protection accorded the foreign activities of American enterprise by the United States Government, by foreign governments and by rules of international law; (e) the efficacy and use of choice-of-law and choice-of-forum clauses; (f) arbitration; (g) the Common Market and other attempts at economic integration and unification of law; (h) organization of bench and bar in foreign countries, (i) problems of language; (j) European antitrust law and application of United States antitrust law to foreign business activities; and (k) taxation.

Lawyers from a number of foreign countries have attended the program in recent years. Their presence has enriched the experience of the American participants.

Further information about the program can be obtained from Willis L. M. Reese, Director of the Parker School of Foreign and Comparative Law, Columbia University, 435 West 116th Street, New York, New York 10027.
