INTER ALIA

On April 4-6 the Journal will host the Ninth National Conference of Law Reviews. General assemblies, luncheons, and seminar meetings—all devoted to discussions of the purposes and problems of the law review—will be held on the S.M.U. campus over the two-day period. Speakers for the Conference include Dean John W. Riehm, who will welcome the delegates, and Judge John Wisdom, of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, who will deliver the concluding address.

The Conference membership includes practically all of the law reviews in the United States. At these annual meetings each review is represented by at least one "outgoing" editor and one or more "incoming" editors. Workshop sessions led by the old editors serve to acquaint the new editors with the problems that they will encounter during their administrations. This year Conference officers are expecting about 45 reviews and 140 delegates to be in attendance.

The S.M.U. School of Law Moot Court Team, composed of Mike Rohde, Board Member Bill Boyd, and Candidate Neil Weatherhogg, won the regional competition at Tulsa, Oklahoma, this winter. Neil Weatherhogg was awarded the trophy for the outstanding speaker. In the national competition in New York, the team beat George Washington and Texas before losing to Illinois in the quarterfinals.

There have been several recent changes in Journal personnel. Bill Boyd and Ronald Holley are now members of the Board of Editors. New Invitees on the Journal staff are M. Nancy Best and H. Gary Knight.

In attempting to establish a library, the Journal finds that it lacks several items. Specifically, we need volumes 219-307 of South Western Second, 118-present of Federal Second, and 25-40 of the Texas Law Review. If you can help us obtain these books, please write.

The Journal apologizes for two misspelled names in an ad in volume 16, issue 4. Dr. Walter Boles' name was incorrectly listed as "Bolles," and the name of Mr. Chrys Dougherty was improperly printed as "Doughtery."
