INTER ALIA

Perhaps it would be best to ignore the tardiness of publication of this issue of the Southwestern Law Journal. However, the editorial staff refuses to drop the subject until its vows and resolutions are matched by performance. Again it is hoped that the next issue will come off the press in timely fashion.

The Summer, 1953, issue of the Journal will be a Survey of Southwestern Law for the year 1952. Important legislation and decisions of the year will be reviewed. In addition, present plans are to include the first installment of an article by Joseph M. Cormack, Professor of Law at The College of William and Mary, entitled "Operation of the Mexican Labor Law."

Lawyers Week, held on April 20-25, was in all respects a successful series of events. An Institute on the Trial of a Land Suit was held, and a demonstration of a land suit was given. The 1953 Conference on Law in Society was presented, and the theme of the speakers was "Origins of the Natural Law Tradition." Some of the old professorial hands around the Law School were surprised at the excellent attendance at the Conference and the interest evinced in a thoroughly intellectual discussion. One day was spent on "A Legal Study of the Texas Business Corporation Act." Other events included fraternity breakfasts, a buffet dinner and reception, the annual membership meeting of the Southwestern Legal Foundation, the Senior Case Club Argument before the Supreme Court of Texas and the concluding annual banquet.

An innovation during the Spring Semester was the Law School Recognition Assembly, convened on May 5, sponsored by The Student Bar Association. Various honors were announced and recognition given for noteworthy performances by student and faculty during the past school year.
