BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS — A SELECTED LIST

An air power fable for adults. The Big Black Bear, who after awaking from his long nap on the leftist side of his bed, refused to join at play the other forest animals, and tried to make bears of the little squirrel and chipmunk while stealing their food. His rapacity was ended, when, on invading the land of milk and honey across the pond, he was attacked and destroyed by the airpower of the bees, wasps, and hornets.

A history not only of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, but also an account of the development of the science of aeronautics and of the evolution of airframes, engines, and propellers. Written for the layman, this volume helps fill a gap in the literature of aviation by providing an historical perspective of its technical progress.
